STARTLING UPSETS MARK COUNTY ELECTIONS; JEROME IS DEFEATED

Rolph Leads Young Over State With Fitts In Third

MERRIAM IS VICTOR OVER CARNAHAN

JORDAN IS RETURNED

Ray L. Riley for Controller and Webb for Attorney General Seen

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Virtually complete returns from the 10,283 precincts in the 58 California counties today indicated that James Rolph jr., mayor of San Francisco, will be the next governor of California.

Governor C. C. Young was a fairly close second to Rolph, although it was extremely doubtful whether the Young vote in the interior could offset the support Rolph received as first choice in San Francisco and second choice in Los Angeles.

Buron Fitts, Los Angeles district attorney, was in third place.

The vote, with 8072 precincts heard from was:

Rolph 299,279.

Young 261,323.

Fitts 229,964.

Second Race

The campaign just closed was the second gubernatorial contest in which Rolph has participated. In 1918 Rolph opposed William D. Stephens, who succeeded Hiram W. Johnson as governor. He ran as a Democrat and Republican, winning the Democratic nomination but losing the Republican contest and later the supreme court ruled that he could not participate in the general election because he was registered as a Republican.

It was apparent at midday that Frank Merriam, Long Beach, had won the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, Tallant Tubbs, San Francisco, was the closest opponent to the Long Beach man.

Returns from 6688 precincts gave Merriam 132,650 votes and Tubbs 105,147.

Most of the outstanding precincts are comparatively unimportant so far as the gubernatorial race is concerned. Seven hundred Los Angeles county precincts have yet to report but so far Rolph has been second in Los Angeles county, with Fitts first, so that the report on these outstanding districts probably will not materially affect present standings.

A number of northern California precincts are to be heard from also but in these it is anticipated that Rolph and Young will at least break even and in the event that happens the nomination—tantamount t oelection in California—goes to Rolph.

Congress Races

Contests for congressional representation at Washington were comparatively dull, with incumbents being in the lead in all instances.

In the first congressional district Clarence F. Lea, Santa Rosa, apparently had won both the Republican and Democratic nominations. He was opposed for the Republican

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

Never give a boy cool treatment when you want a cool treat.

Calvin Coolidge Says

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE
Former President of United States

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 27. — A study of the economic development of this country, of its capacity to produce and consume, of its manufacturers and its markets, reveals that general business never has found any saturation point.

We have been considering the present as a time of depression. Yet it is now reported that within the past few months one hundred and twenty-five million dollars worth of miniature golf outfits have been put into operation. During the worse period of nineteen twenty-one it was the newly perfected radio that caught the public fancy, with sales soon reaching hundreds of millions of dollars. Before that came the motion picture which now sells over one hundred million admission tickets each week. Meantime the automobile and aircraft industries have been created.

Twenty-five years ago only a few people were engaged in these enterprises. The number now runs into the millions. We can see in these new occupations the natural remedy for labor temporarily displaced by machinery. What course our great financial and scientific resources will take in the next era of development we do not know. But all past experience teaches that it will be an important advance in the economic welfare of the nation.

SCHOONER WITH SEVEN ABOARD REPORTED SUNK

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 27.—(UP) — Three haggard men staggered out of the surf today and told a story of how they had been swimming for eight hours after the wreck of the schooner Francis T., with her crew of seven men.

The men—John Larre, Clarence Atkinson and Freeman Bonbury—said the schooner sailed out of Halifax two weeks ago bound for Bermuda.

The men collapsed on the beach at the foot of Pennsylvania avenue. Patrolman Grant Melvin saw them come stumbling up the sand. He ran over and heard Larre mumble a few words and then all the men pitched forward on their heads, unconscious. A patrol wagon was summoned and the three men were taken to detective headquarters.

Hot food and medical attention revived Larre, Atkinson and Bonbury, and they told a story that started a flurry of activity at coast guard headquarters. Ten minutes later a cutter was under steam and heading for the open sea to search for the water-logged Francis T., and the four other members of the crew who may be standing by, manning the pumps in the attempt to keep the vessel afloat.

It was on August 19, according to Larre, that a storm of hurricane proportions swept the decks of the tiny schooner. Seams began to spread and water seeped into the hold. Reluctant to abandon their cargo, the crew stood by the pumps until last night. In the darkness, 16 miles off shore and in a southerly direction from Atlantic City, the seven men gathered on the deck and decided to send an expedition for aid.

Atkinson ,Bonbury and Larre were chosen to take the frail dory and make their way to shore. They said they took the dory through a high running sea for about 11 miles and then a wave caught the small craft and pitched the three men into the sea. Somehow they got together in the darkness, picked their direction and started the long swim for land.

Larre declared they had been swimming for eight hours before their feet touched bottom and they crawled up on the beach to faint from exhaustion.

HEAT WAVE IS SWEEPING OVER BRITISH ISLES

LONDON, Aug. 27. — (UP) — A heat wave that hourly became more severe spread over the British Isles, parts of Europe and the African coast today with the breaking of the recent period of cold summer weather.

London experienced the hottest night ever recorded for the last week in August after a maximum temperature of 88 degrees yesterday. Today the sun burned the city again, driving the mercury up to 84 in the shade this morning and promising to increase the temperature steadily throughout the afternoon.

Holiday makers, convinced that the recent cold weather would continue, were caught at the resorts with only heavy clothing and many were forced to curtail their vacations. Swimming pools were crowded as early as 6 a. m., particularly Lansburys Lido in Hyde park where many stenographers could be seen leaving for offices clad in light frocks over their bathing costumes.

Army maneuvers in Surrey were suspended in mid-battle due to the intense heat.

The British tradition of never discarding vest, or even coat, was overcome when the temperature increased to 88 degrees in the shade at 1 p. m.

Stockbrokers in shirt sleeves, but still wearing their top hats, astonished the business section of the city, just as the classical concert at Queens Hall last night was marked by the doffing of coats by patrons who had gathered to hear Tschaikovsky's fifth symphony.

65 Endangered As Gas Fumes Sweep Through Hospital

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 27.—(UP)—Chemical fumes from a fumigator in a ward which had been vacated for disinfection spread through St. Mary's hospital here today, imperilling the lives of 65 bedridden patients.

All the patients were moved from the gassed ward, half of them being placed in the hospital yard and the rest in a new wing of the building into which the gas did not penetrate.

"MA" KENNEDY AND DAUGHTER RECONCILED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—(UP)—(INS)—The reported reconciliation between Mrs. Minnie Kennedy and her daughter, Aimee Semple McPherson, noted evangelist, today had reached a point where they had exchanged notes with each other.

From the Malibu Beach cottage, where the evangelist is reported recovering from a threatened nervous breakdown, came a note to her mother who is at a Brentwood sanitarium. The text of the note was not revealed. Mrs. Kennedy replied to the note yesterday, but she would not reveal the contents.

Mrs. Kennedy was expected to leave the sanitarium at Brentwood today. The bandage has been removed from her injured nose and she expressed the hope that the nose would be straight. She claimed it was injured during a skirmish with her daughter.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Kennedy has

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Lon Chaney, filmdom's "man of a thousand faces," will be buried with the same lack of pomp and ceremony that characterized his life, friends and relatives revealed today in announcing plans for his funeral.

The man who reached the pinnacle of motion picture fame through his grotesque characterizations will be buried tomorrow beside the body of his father in Forest Lawn cemetery, Glendale. Rev. Michael J. Mullins, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd, will officiate at the simple funeral services.

Chaney died suddenly yesterday morning in St. Vincent's hospital from a hemorrhage of the throat. He had been suffering from anemia

Plotters Planned To Blame Slaying On Capone, Charge

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 27.—(UP)—The plan in an alleged plot to assassinate Gov. Doyle E. Carlton was to blame the slaying on Al Capone, Chicago gang leader, Clem Dowling, roommate of one of three men charged with conspiring to take the governor's life, testified at a preliminary hearing today.

Dowling, first witness for the prosecution, said that Frank Rawls, one of the defendants, told him on July 15 that Carlton "will be bumped off" and there was "no chance to get caught; we've got a way to blame Capone."

Plane Turns Over, Blazes And Crashes

First Reports Said Craft Had Fallen Into Crowd and Many Killed

CURTISS WRIGHT AIRPORT, CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—A navy pursuit plane flipped over and caught fire at the southeast end of the grandstand while hurtling through space at approximately 150 miles an hour during the national air races today.

Lieutenant J. P. Deshazo. 23 year old pilot, was removed from the wreckage of his plane and died a few minutes later in the airport hospital, the first fatality of the meet which began last Saturday.

Deshazo was streaking around the five mile racing course with 16 other navy pursuit planes which were taking part in the most spectacular speed event of the day when his tiny Bowing super equipped plane was caught in a rush of air from rival craft and thrown over. The plane fell about 50 feet.

From the press box it appeared at first that the plane had crashed into a crowd occupying bleacher seats at the southeast end of the field.

NAVY CUTTING DOWN ON SHORE EXPENSES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(UP)—An exhaustive study of naval shore projects was under way today in connection with the navy's economy drive which already has reduced expenditures by nearly $8,000,000.

Assistant Secretary Jahncke said it has become apparent the navy is operating certain stations and shore properties which cannot be regarded as essential. He said bureau chiefs and the budget officer would submit the results of their study to Secretary Adams, who will determine where the economies can best be effected.

Jahncke declared no desision has been reached on the proposed abandonment of the navy yard at Charleston, S. C., and other shore projects.

LORD BEAVERBROOK ILL ABOARD YACHT

DOVER, Eng., Aug. 27.—(UP)—Lord Beaverbrook, the publisher, was ill aboard his yacht today. He was suffering from food poisoning.

His London physician, Dr. Wilson, was summoned to Dover to aid Dr. Laird, who was attending the publisher. Lord Beaverbrook was spending a holiday on his yacht.

Lord Beaverbrook, publisher of the London Daily Express and the London Evening Standard, has been one of the outstanding exponents of empire free trade, which he sought to persuade the conservative party to adopt as a platform.

LOGAN JACKSON LEADS JERNIGAN; WESTOVER TO CONTEST WITH COLLINS

FITTS IS FIRST IN COUNTY

ORANGE COUNTY VOTERS yesterday expressed their preference for state, county and township officials in one of the hottest and most interesting primary elections that the county has seen for some time. Returns were slow in coming into the county clerk's office and it was not until after 11 o'clock today that the last precinct total was reported to County Clerk J. M. Backs. More than 26,000 voters participated in the election, making a percentage of eligible votes cast of approximately 54.

Orange county voters gave Buron Fitts, the crusading district attorney of Los Angeles county, a handsome majority, relegating Gov. C. C. Young to second place and trailing James Rolph, San Francisco mayor, in the cellar position. Official returns from 149 precincts of the 189 in the county gave these candidates the following vote: Fitts, 9418; Young, 4355; Rolph, 3509.

Many Upsets

Several upsets were on the street as the votes were tallied, chief among them being the defeat of County Auditor W. C. Jerome, whose opponent, W. T. Lambert, newspaper man of Laguna Beach, rolled in 12,556 votes to the 12,143 that were cast for Jerome. Another new face that will be seen in the court house as a result of the nomination, which is equivalent to election when there are only two candidates, will be that of Ray Adkinson, vice principal of the Santa Ana high school, who defeated R. P. Mitchell in the race for the office of county school superintendent. J. C. Joplin, treasurer for many terms, ran third in the race for renomination, being headed by Earl Abbey, deputy county clerk and E. B. Trago, merchant, and was eliminated from the race. Trago and Abbey will make the race for the office next fall. In the primary, the vote was as follows for this office: Trago, 10,432; Abbey, 7358; Joplin, 7068.

Popular interest centered in the race for places on the ticket in connection with the offices of district attorney and sheriff, with a number of candidates in the field for each of these important county offices, and cheering for favorites was indulged in at the office of County Clerk J. M. Backs as the official returns were brought in bringing additional votes to swell the count of first one and then another.

Westover On Ticket

The fact that Sam Collins, assistant district attorney, would be assured first place on the ticket was quite evident as the returns slowly rolled in during the night. Harry Westover, who has made an active campaign on a law enforcement program, ran second with D. G. Wettlin, Orange attorney and R. E. Haynes, of Fullerton following. Collins received an outstanding plurality with 11,-

ELLIOTT LEADS FIELD IN RACE FOR CONSTABLE

COMPLETE RETURNS from all Santa Ana township precincts show that Jess Elliott, incumbent, leads the race for constable by a safe margin, while Cornish Roehm, Santa Ana police officer was second and State Traffic Officer Vernon Barnhill was third.

Joseph Ryan, incumbent, ran fourth, Bert Dawson was fifth and Frank Lutz was sixth in the race.

The result of the constable's race indicate that Elliott may not have to make a second race in November for one of the constable offices, while the second will be decided between Roehm and Barnhill. There was less than 100 votes between the two.

Roehm's vote was somewhat of a surprise. He ran a good race throughout the city, piling up a big majority in a number of city precincts. The vote was as follows:

Elliott 4644.
Roehm 2484.
Barnhill 2392.
Ryan 1463.
Dawson 1386.
Lutz 1351.

PERU RECOGNITION DELAYED BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Secretary of State Stimson said today he did not believe the situation in Peru, where President Legula has been overthrown and a revolutionary government set up, had yet reached the stage where the state department felt called on to consider a recognition policy toward the new regime.

Officials consider conditions in Peru still are chaotic and hence are avoiding commitments on future foreign policy of the United States toward whatever government may emerge from the present revolution.

Arctic Explorers' Relatives Enroute To Meet Steamer

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Relatives of the late Salomon Auguste Andree, Swedish balloonist-explorer, whose ice encased body was found in the Arctic last week, were enroute today to Tromsoe to meet the steamer Bratvaag, which is returning the remains to civilization, the Svenska Dagebladet's Tromsoe correspondent reported.

The Bratvaag also is returning the bodies of Nils Strindberg and Knut Fraenkel, Andree's companions on an attempted balloon flight over the North Pole, which ended in disaster within the Arctic circle. The three bodies, excellently preserved in the ice, were found by Dr. Gunnar Horn.

UPSETS MARK ELECTION IN ORANGE COUNTY

659 votes checked under his name. Westover polled 7322 and these two men will fight it out for the office at the November election. Wettlin ran third with 4616 votes and Haynes had a total of 2246.

In the sheriff's "free for all," Logan Jackson, of Orange, one of the law enforcement candidates who shared the support of the Law Enforcement League and the People's League with James Pearson, showed surprising strength and ran in the lead with a total of 6977. Sam Jernigan, incumbent, pulled 6565 votes for second position and these two candidates will again go to the polls in November for selection of the man who will hold this office for the next four years. James Pearson, chief of police at Fullerton, ran third in the race, with the support of 5024 voters in the county. Leo Porter, of Fullerton, was next in line with 4772 votes. Ralph McFadden, rancher, polled 2883 votes for fifth place; "Bill" Sylvester, of Santa Ana, carried 1587 and W. J. McCardia, rancher who made a campaign with the assistance of his six children as an orchestra, wound up the list in the sheriff's race with 343 votes.

Sleeper Wins

One of the hottest races of the campaign was between James Sleeper, county assessor, and George Montgomery, of Anaheim, who made a determined effort to dislodge Sleeper from the position he has held for 20 years. His efforts were unsuccessful however, for Sleeper rolled up one of the biggest votes in the contest to defeat him. The result was Sleeper 16,087; Montgomery, 10,224.

In the competitive races the ticket was led in the county by Coroner Charles D. Brown, who garnered 18,242 votes to defeat Dr. J. G. Berneicke, whose vote for the office of coroner and public administrator totaled 5167. The next to the highest competitive vote was recorded in favor of Tax Collector John C. Lamb, who was supported by 17,504 voters in his race against Mrs. Belle Spangler. Mrs. Spangler received 8760 votes.

The highest vote was received by Miss Justine Whitney, county recorder, who was not opposed. County Clerk J. M. Backs was also returned to office without competition, receiving 20,256 votes.

Hillyard Elected

W. K. Hillyard, incumbent, was victor in the race for the position as county surveyor, receiving 15,100 ballots as compared to 7580 that were voted for his opponent, W. G. Knox, former city manager of Santa Ana, who received 7580.

The returns for the county offices given above are complete official returns with the exception of one precinct in Laguna Beach.

One of the features of the election was the strength shown by Stuart Lucas, of Corona Del Mar, candidate for supervisor from the fifth district. Lucas showed his heels to the field of five competitors and nosed out George Jeffrey, incumbent, for the first position. Lucas had made a strenuous campaign in his district, and the complete official returns as reported by County Clerk J. M. Backs in this race gave him a total of 1000 votes. Jeffrey crowded close behind with 977 ballots, and these two will contest the office at the fall election. Lew Wallace ran third with 912; and the other contestants were C. O. Artz, 845; Eugene Fenelon, 347, and J. W. Sauers, 301.

In the fourth district, Willard Smith, chairman of the board of supervisors, ran true to form and rolled up better than a two to one vote against his opponent, J. F. Snowden. John Mitchell, present member of the board from the second district, also showed his strength in defeating J. A. Armitage, of Sunset Beach, 2045 to 1253.

LEADING

Jesse Elliott, below, was high man in the race for constable of Santa Ana township. Elliott is the incumbent.

DEPUTY AHEAD

been trying to get in touch with Angelus Temple officials, to ask them, she said, concerning the status of a $250,000 note which is payable to her daughter.

"I understand that the Echo Park Evangelistic association deeded Angelus Temple to the Church of the Four Square Gospel, and that part of the payment was a note for $250,000," said Mrs. Kennedy.

ORDERS WAITING FOR ORANGE COUNTY FISH

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 27.—Orders for Orange county packed fish are waiting, ready to be filled as soon as the Newport Packing company gets started, according to W. I. Turck, president of the new corporation, following a meeting of fishermen and others interested in the project.

The meeting was held at the fish packing establishment, at Bay Front and Twenty-eighth street, and began with a mackerel dinner, attended by more than 200, including Mayor M. J. Johnson, Lew Wallace, Stuart H. Lucas and other prominent Newport Beach business men.

Turck said that he plans to have the plant in operation shortly after Sept. 1, in order to take advantage of the skipjack (striped tuna) season, which runs from about Sept. 10 to Oct. 31. Tuna, sardine and mackerel will be packed. The sardine season begins Nov. 1 and runs until April 1.

Mackerel will be packed all year, according to the plans. Already this brand of mackerel has attained distinction, and orders were filled for as far away as Egypt and the Philippines, as well as many parts of the United States. Turck said that this cannery is the only one in the country where all the mackerel canned are individually caught by hook and line. This insure a superior quality of fish, he said.

ORANGE COUNTY STARBOAT MEN OFF FOR EAST

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 27.—The best wishes of Newport bay and Orange county yachtmen and boating fans will go with Walton Hubbard jr., skipper of the Tempe IV, who will compete in the annual races of the International Star Class Yacht Racing association, representing the Newport Harbor Yacht club, at Chesapeake bay, Maryland, September 29 to October 3.

Hubbard will have as his crew, Tom Ditmar, local boat builder, who will also look after the Tempe IV during the races. Ditmar has already left for the east on other business, and the Tempe IV has been shipped to Chesapeake bay. Hubbard is a son of Dr. Walton Hubbard, of Los Angeles, who has a summer home here and is an enthusiastic Newport harbor booster.

The annual starboat classic is held each year at the home port of the winning boat. Hubbard with Dick Edwards as crew, won the championship at Naragannset Bay, R. I., in 1927, which brought the 1928 event here. In 1928 the Edington of New Orleans, won and the Eel of Chesapeake bay was first in New Orleans last fall.

J. M. Webster, captain of the star fleet of the Newport Harbor Yacht club, said that the title has never yet been won twice by the same club or the same skipper. Therefore, if Hubbard can bring it back to Newport harbor, he will not only assure a big international event for this port next year, but break a record.

Starboats from Canada, Hawaii, the Philippines, Cuba, France, England and perhaps other countries will compete at Chesapeake bay, as well as from nearly a dozen states of this country.

6 Cars of Cattle Shipped to Midway City from Montana

MIDWAY CITY, Aug. 27.—Six carloads of thoroughbred Hereford cattle were brought into Midway City today by Walter J. Hill, owner of Midway City. There were 35 milk cows in the lot, the others being one and two year old bulls. They were shipped from Hill's Montana ranch and were trucked from Los Angeles and are in pasture on the former Johnson property, which Hill recently acquired.

L. A. PRODUCE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Buying was rather limited on today's market with slow movement in practically all lines. Several lines were in over supply with prices considerably weaker. Local loose avocados jobbed at 20-25c per lb. on seedlings with Harmons at 20-30c.

Cantaloupes were in heavy supply with receipts for the past few days ranging from 7000 to 10,000 crates. Hales best and Paul Rose, loose in standard crates, jobbed at 79-95c on 24s-27s.

The fig market was weak with heavy receipts of local stock. Local Brunswicks moved slowly at 2-5c per lb., few higher. Black Missions ranged from 30-50c per flat of 6-7 lbs., with 15 lb. flats bringing 90c-$1.00; a few 12 lb. flats of best quality stock jobbed as high as $1.00-$1.25.

The grape market was dull with San Joaquin seedless ranging from 15-40c per lug and Muscats 2½-3c per lb. Local Malagas jobbed at 35-40c per lug.

The lettuce market was about steady with Santa Maria, Guadalupe, and San Luis Obispo dry pack 4s bringing $1.50-$2.00.

Yucaipa Hale peaches were stronger under lighter receipts, with large stock jobbing as high as 5-6c. Elbertas brought 2½-3½c with Lovells at 1½-2c. Local Elbertas jobbed at 2½-3c on small stock, 3c on medium. Pears were in over supply and the market continued dull.

Loval quinces brought 2-3c er lb.

AIRPLANE BATHING

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Swimming parties by airplane are all the rage in England. The Northampton Aero club and various other such clubs in the Midland area have organized swimming parties and good sized crowds leave the airports for Castle Ashby lake, property of Lord Northampton, every day.

ROLPH LEADS YOUNG IN RACE FOR GOVERNOR

nomination by Thomas Allan Box and Norman R. Smith.

Harry L. Englebright, Nevada City, was unopposed for both the Republican and Democratic nominations.

In the third district C. F. Curry was assured of another term in Washington when no Republican opposition developed, although H. F. Boke, Napa, did run as a Democrat.

Florence P. Kahn, San Francisco, easily won the Republican nomination in the fourth district, being opposed by Harry W. Hutton, San Francisco.

Richard J. Welch, ran as both a Republican and Democrat and apparently won out in a stiff battle against George J. Steiger, municipal judge of San Francisco.

In the sixth district Albert E. Carter won the Republican nomination.

Henry E. Barbour, Fresno, of the seventh district was not opposed for either the Democratic or Republican nominations, a distinction he has enjoyed for several terms.

Arthur M. Free won the Republican nomination in the eighth district.

William E. Evans, Republican, was not opposed in the ninth.

Dockweiler Wins

John F. Dockweiler, Los Angeles, apparently was victor for the Republican nomination in the tenth district as was Phil D. Swing of the eleventh, running as both a Republican and Democrat.

A surprising feature of the primary was that Rolph ran second in Los Angeles, the Fitts stronghold.

A divided dry vote was held to be partly responsible for the strong showing of the San Francisco candidate.

Young had received the endorsement of the California Anti-Saloon league but many leaders in the cause of prohibition refused to follow the organization program and supported Fitts.

While Rolph said nothing in his campaign in regard to prohibition, it was well known that he has always been in favor of modification of the Volstead act.

The bulk of the Fitts strength was in Southern California while Rolph and Young divided the northern California vote, with Rolph leading in his home city of San Francisco.

Another division, and an important one, was that dry leaders were split on Fitts and Young, both ardent prohibitionists. Rolph, long known as a modificationist, declined to say anything in regard to prohibition during his campaign but his opponents stressed his anti-prohibition statements of other years.

Nominations

Returns from all parts of California indicated today that the following men were nominated to represent their political parties in the general election in November at which the Republican nomination for all offices is tantamount to election:

FUNERAL FOR CHANEY TO BE ON THURSDAY

but was believed recovering until he was stricken with the fatal hemorrhage. He was talking quietly with his wife and son, Creighton, a few minutes before he died.

He had talked the day before his death of plans for his second talking picture, "Charl Bebi," which he had selected himself. The role would have required his greatest skill in changing his features, for which he was famous.

Chaney's ability to achieve varied facial expressions was due in a large measure to his early training in conversing with his parents, both of whom were deaf mutes. All their children, however, were normal.

The affection held for Chaney by his audiences was shown during the last days of his illness, when thousands of telephone calls deluged the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Scores of persons offered their blood when transfusions were resorted to in an attempt to save his life.

The funeral services will begin at 2 o'clock in a Los Angeles chapel and will be attended by only a few friends. Later the cortege will escort the veteran actor to his last resting place a few miles away.

Active pallbearers will be John Jeske, Clinton Lyle, R. L. Hickley, Phil Epstein, William Duntry and Claude I. Parker. Among the screen notables who will serve as honorary pallbearers are Louis B. Mayer, General Smedley D. Butler, Irving G. Thalberg, Hunt Stromberg, Milton M. Cohen, Paul Bern, Chester Vanderlip, Dr. John C. Webster, Tod Browning, Harry Carey, Lionel Barrymore, Ramon Navarro, William Haines, Lawrence Tibbett, Harry Rapf, Cliff Edwards, Fred Niblo, Edgar Selwyn and Wallace Beery.

IN FRONT

E. B. Trago, president of the F. P. Nickey Hardware company, who is the leading candidate for the position of county treasurer. He will be on the ballot in November.

BRIDGE APPROACHES READY IN 2 WEEKS

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 27.—Approaches to both ends of the new Lido isle bridge will be completed in about two weeks, according to David G. Duncan, sales manager for Lido isle here.

By that time also it is expected that a paved road will be completed all the way around the island. It is now being completed as far as the clubhouse.

Rapid progress is being made in completing the installation of gas, water, sewer and other utility connections, and in less than two months Duncan predicts that the entire $1,170,000 improvement will be a reality.

DEATHS

A WORD OF COMFORT

If your will is paralyzed there is poison at work in your system. That poison is selfishness and selfcenteredness and self pity.

You say you are powerless to care or to try to rise out of the vale of misery and woe and despair in order that you may perform some worthy work in the world.

It may hurt you to be told what your ailment is, but the truth will out. Begin thinking about what God is wanting you to be, to do and to become, and of how He is depending upon you, and you will discover within yourself the cleansing desire and strength to do, which will transform your life.

Local Briefs

"The largest strap watch in the world," now being shown in the window of Woodruff-Granas Co., 218 West Fourth St., is a most unusual display. It is a replica, many times enlarged, of the Illinois "Beau Brummel" strap watch. The Statue of Liberty would find it quite a comfortable fit—and an accurate timekeeper also, for one of the amazing features about this large watch is that it keeps accurate time.

NOTED FLIERS ARE TO PILOT HUGE AIRSHIP

The Albatross, giant monoplane built at Midway City by the Zenith Aircraft corporation two years ago, is to make an assault on the world's refueling endurance record in the near future, it was learned here today.

Loren W. Mendell and R. B. (Pete) Reinhart, who set a record of 246 hours last summer at Marysville, Mich., will pilot the plane, which will take off from a Los Angeles airport in an attempt to better the record of 27 days aloft recently achieved by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine.

The Albatross was built two years ago and made an attempt from the Orange county airport to set a world's record, failing because of engine trouble, but achieving several world's records for efficiency in carrying maximum loads. Another attempt was made in a takeoff from an Imperial valley airport.

New engines are being installed in the plane at present and it is being carefully groomed for its attack on the world's record. The craft has a wing spread of 90 feet and at the time it was built was the largest monoplane in existence.

INSECT PESTS ARE BANISHED AT CAPE COD

NANTUCKET, Mass., Aug. 27.—(INS)—The mosquito has stung its last. The eradication results against the pest that has broken up many a Cape Cod picnic and caused considerable discomfort to visitors and vacationists has been attained.

After a three year fight against the pests on the Cape in which large sums of money have been used in eradication of the mosquito, Harry V. Lawrence, of Falmouth, chairman of the control work in the upper Cape towns, declared the Nantucket results most satisfactory.

In proving the results obtained. Chairman Lawrence and a party of seventy-seven embarked on a journey to this island to observe the results obtained after the three years fight against the pests. A money prize was offered to any member of the group that found a mosquito. The party went through areas from Polpis to Eels Point and made careful search for traces of the insects, many of the searchers were armed with field glasses as they turned over grass and dirt. Every area which was heavily infested, was visited.

Residents and seasonal visitors to the island were jubilant at the report.

The work against the pests was begun three years back. This spring the town used $15,000, half of which was raised by public subscription, and some 260,000 feet of will be made against the insects." ditch was laid. Each spring a drive

OLD NECROPOLIS OF CARMONA RETURNED

MADRID, Aug. 27.—(UP)—The famous Necropolis of Carmona, one of the most interesting relics of the Roman domination of the Iberian peninsula, recently was transferred to the state by its owner, George Bonsor Saint Martin, a British subject, who has lived in Andalusia nearly all his life.

A royal order was published in the "Gaceta de Madrid" of July 24, 1930, through which the minister of instruction and fine arts, don Elias Tormo, in behalf of King Alfonso, accepted the donation made by Bonsor as he is known in Spain. The government agreed that Bonsor and his family may continue living in the habitable parts of the Necropolis, and that Bonsor will during his life time be the sole director of the museum and excavation works.

With the donation of one of the most interesting relics of the Roman era passes into the hands of the state and it is believed that its future care and upkeep will be assured.

The Necropolis was discovered in 1868, in the course of some road construction, and parts of it were destroyed through ignorance. The Spanish archaeologist, Juan Fernandez Lopez and the painter, George Bonsor, in 1880 bought up most of the land, and began excavations.

By 1885 200 tombs had been discovered and the next year more tombs and an ampitheatre were found. The most important sepulchre found was that of the Elephant—so named because a painting of an elephant, symbol of longevity—was found in it:. It contains a patio, kitchen, bath and several chambers. The Necropolis dates from the second century before Christ to the fourth century A. D. Fernandez died in 1925, willing his portion to Bonsor.

Carmona is a town of 17,000, very near Seville.

The first rivetless cargo vessel, a 2500-barrel tanker fabricated entirely by the arc-welding method, has been launched in Charleston, S. C. Nine workmen only were employed in building the boat.

BIG BUSINESS TO BE STUDIED BY LONDONER

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(INS)—To obtain for Britain the big business ideas of the United States, the London School of Economics is sending Jules Menken to New York to study business schools in New York and other parts of America.

This is the preliminary step to the establishment of a department for business training, administration and research which the School of Economics intends to establish.

Menken will be the first principal of this department. He is a professional advisor on economics, marketing and the application of economic statistics to business. He began his study of economics at Columbia University and completed it at Cambridge University.

"We know already that American methods are not applicable in their entirety," says Menken, "because their problems differ in some respects from ours.

"In America you have mass distribution, in addition to mass production. In England you have mass production, but not on the same scale as in America, and there is nothing which can be called mass distribution.

"The American home market is also infinitely bigger than ours—$600,000,000 against $225,000,000. But their schools of business have been immensely successful, and are bound to be fruitful sources of study."

SIDEWALK CAFE IS POPULAR IN HAVANA

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 27.—(INS)—The continental sidewalk cafe which made its first appearance here several weeks ago as an experiment under government provisional consent today had become an established institution of this resort.

With the decision of officials that the sidewalk retreats will in no way impair traffic, the provinional permission was recalled and authority granted for widespread establishment of the popular lounging places. As a result, hundreds of the American tourists now in the city this week have begun flocking to the new cafes with such ardor that officials are predicting they will soon become one of Havana's most popular resort institutions. The Prado, the city's beautiful main downtown thoroughfare, is particularly favored as a site for the cafes because of its prestige as a gathering place for the elite of the resort.

ARCHITECT PUZZLES OVER OLD BUILDING

MILFORD, Conn., Aug. 27.—The Freelove Baldwin Stow house here, which is to house the Milford Historical society of which J. P. Morgan has recently become a contributing member and which he had aided in purchasing, is a mystery to J. Frederick Kelly, of New Haven, one of the leading experts in colonial architecture. The house is one of the "most interesting examples of Seventeenth century homes standing today," according to Kelly, "but it does not conform to any of the conventional plans which were fairly well standardized in Connecticut."

The old house, which has been standing unnoticed for years and permitted to go to ruin without man's thought, has two chimneys and a roof of purlin and ridge system. Kelly finds evidence of a chimney having been added to the original house, but he fails to find that the roof has ever been patched so as to support his original theory that the house was built with one chimney and then remodelled by the removal of the chimney and its replacement by two.

The house was the homestead of the Eels and Stow families, original settlers here. From the Eels family Morgan is descended. Kelly believes the house was built as a "salt-box" house in the late 1600's, and reconstructed before the revolution. As matter stands he places the house of 1720 construction in its present stage. But he is curious as to how it was changed.

Kelly also found "dog-legged" stairs in the house, something he has found in no other Connecticut house, and he has been in many, perpetuating their plans.

CLUB SPEAKER TELLS CHANGE IN FASHIONS

Talking on the subject "How the Old Fogy Looks At It," W. Maxwell Burke entertained the 20-30 club at the regular weekly meeting held last night at the Santa Ana cafe.

With R. M. Conklin in charge of the program, a very enjoyable meeting was held. Burke told of the change in fashions and customs of several years ago and interspersed his talk with humorous experiences.

Harry Jensen offered two vocal solos. He was accompanied at the piano by Duncan Harnois. Lee Finley, president, was absent, his place being filled by Frank Humphrey.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the Santa Ana cafe next Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. It will be a closed meeting and will feature reports of the state convention of 20-30 clubs to be held at San Jose from August 29 to September 1. Lee Finley and Tevis Westgate will represent the Santa Ana club at the conclave.

What is supposed to be the first undersea class room in the world has just been organized by Dr. F. Person, of the University of Miami, in Florida.

PHONE DIRECTORY PRESS DATE SET

The October issue of the Orange county telephone directory goes to press on Monday, September 1, and will contain all changes and additions and listings of new telephones installed by that day, according to E. S. Morrow, district manager of the Southern California Telephone company. The new book ,to be delivered about the first of October, will list telephones in the Anaheim, Brea, Dana Point, Fullerton, Garden Grove, Newport Beach, Orange, Placentia, San Clemente, San Juan Capistrano and Santa Ana exchanges.

The directory will have a brown cover instead of the blue and grey of the last issue. Instructions and other material in connection with the telephone service will be on an emergency page, as in the last book.

Citizens Training Camps Are Praised

CINCINNATI, Aug. 2.—(INS)—"The greatest educational project the United States government has ever attempted."

This was the description of Citizens Military Training Camps given by Judge Thomas H. Morrow of Common Pleas Court here today in a recent greeting at Camp Galbraith, Fort Thomas, Ky., to 1100 youths.

MANAGER

The manager of the Santa Ana store of the Wylie B. Allen company, Harry H. Clubb, below, is widely known for his work with boys and girls in band music. He has interested 1200 children and started them in band work in the last ten years.

NEW MAIL BOXES INSTALLED HERE

Six shiney, new relay mail boxes, holding from 150 to 200 pounds of mail arrived yesterday morning at the Santa Ana post office. The new boxes, according to L. F. Harvey, superintendent of mails, are to be used only for the convenience of the mail carriers.

The old mail boxes were used as a combination for both the carriers and the public but the people will not have access to the new boxes. Many carriers have 100 to 150 pounds of mail, explained Harvey, whereas they should only carry 50 pounds at the maximum. This is where the relay boxes are to be used. Instead of making trips back to the post office the carriers can put all their mail in the boxes and save much time and work, Harvey explained.

Two of the boxes are in use already, it was reported. The others will be placed where there is the most need for them.

PERU LEADERS TO ARREST FOREIGNERS

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Thirty prominent persons, including some foreigners, were ordered arrested today as the Peruvian military government, prepared to bring to account those who profited by the 11-year dictatorship of the former president, Augusto B. Leguia.

The names of the persons wanted were not made public, nor the nationalities of the foreigners. Their identities probably will be known only as they are rounded up and brought before representatives of the newly formed government to answer to whatever charges may be placed against them.

Leguia, the indomitable figure who successfully governed Peru for 11 years, lay meanwhile in a serious condition aboard the Peruvian warship Admiral Grau in Call harbor. Leguit was afflicted with uremia, an ailment from which he has been a chronic sufferer for the past four years.

The deposed president, now virtually a prisoner of the military government, was visited four times yesterday by Dr. Donald McCornack, one of the directors of the British-American hospital here. The physician could not be reached for a comment on Leguia's condition, but it was learned that the former president was running a temperature of 100.4 degrees.

Austrians Creates 'Immortals Society'

VIENNA, Aug. 27.—(INS)— A new "Immortals' Society" has been created by the Austrian government, by instituting a new Order of Merit in Arts and Sciences.

The Austrian Ministry of Education will confirm the order, which is to rank among the highest of Austrian personalities, who will constitute the preliminary "Chapter" of the order. Further confirmations can be granted by the ministry only if the members of the order have declared themselves for the candidate under consideration. The order at one time will never exceed more than 25 members, 12 Austrian and 12 foreigners.

It will undoubtedly be one of the most exclusive buttonhole filling societies of the world.

WYLIE B. ALLEN TO OPEN STORE IN SANTA ANA

One of the oldest and best known music houses in Southern California will be represented in Santa Ana commencing Thursday, with the opening of the Santa Ana store of the Wylie B. Allen company. The first store of this pioneer firm was established in San Jose in 1873. The Santa Ana branch, which will be located at 420 West Fourth street, will have its formal opening on Friday, although it will open its doors on Thursday.

Harry H. Clubb, an accomplished musician who has trained hundreds of boys and girls in band music and who has organized many children's bands, will be manager of the store, and will have as his assistant Howard S. Jones, formerly of Pittsburgh. The two men are moving with their families to Santa Ana.

Clubb has started 1200 children in band music in the last ten years and stated that he was considering organizing a boys' band in Santa Ana. He has been deeply interested in music since childhood, when at an early age he mastered the harmonica, cornet, fife, violin and organ. During the Spanish American war he was band master of the first Wyoming infantry. After the war he continued his musical career by finding employment with a music house and later went in the music business for himself. His boys' band at Santa Barbara, where he was located for a time, grew until it numbered 154 members.

The Wylie B. Allen company, which is bringing Clubb to Santa Ana as its store manager, has for its slogan "The maximum value, per dollar invested," and has many friends throughout the entire Pacific coast where its store are located. The firm takes great pride in the value given and the service rendered through its many branches.

E. Palmer Tucker, in charge of the Southern California district of Los Angeles, is president of the company which has been in business on the Pacific coast for the last 57 years, and has been connected with the Wylie B. Allen company since 1907, after entering the musical instrument business in 1900. He is a member of the board of directors of the Bank of Italy, Lincoln Mortgage company and Monte Rio corporation and is president and director of the Music Trades association of Southern California.

The Santa Ana store of this pioneer music house will handle only radio receiving sets and pianos at the outset of its operations in this distrct.

Says Jones Liquor Law Sponsored By Justice Division

SEATTLE, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Authorship of the "Jones five and ten law" was disclaimed by Sen. Wesley L. Jones today when he refused to accept the challenge of Ralph A. Hoor, wet Republican congressional candidate, to debate prohibition in the primary campaign.

The "five and ten" law, Jones said, came from the department of justice.

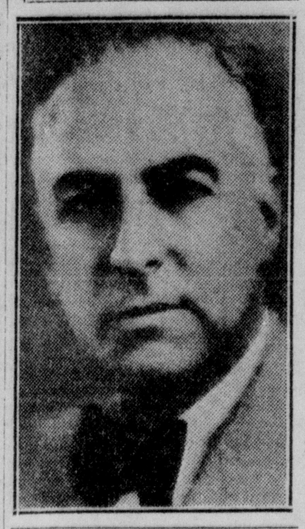
"I introduced it at their request," he said.

Jones refrained from commenting upon criticism recently directed at the law by George W. Wickersham, chairman of President Hoover's law enforcement commission. Horr had listed the law as one subject to be debated.

Although declining to participate in the primary battles, Jones reaffirmed his support of the 18th amendment and dry legislation.

DISTRICT CHIEF

E. Palmer Tucker, below, in charge of the Southern California district for the Wylie B. Allen company, pioneers on the Pacific coast as a musical instrument house, which is opening a branch in Santa Ana Thursday, Aug. 28. He is prominent in business and fraternal circles.



MOTIVE IN BRUTAL SLAYING IS SOUGHT

ENSENADA, Lower California, Mex., Aug. 27.—(UP)—A motive for the brutal slaying of Francis Conlon, 24, Monrovia, Calif., business man and his fiancee, Lois Marion Kentle, Los Angeles sorority girl, was sought by Mexican and American authorities today.

The bodies of the couple, stabbed to death by an unknown assailant, were found on the beac hhere yesterday. Near the spot were evidences of a camping ground that evidently had been hastily broken up, police said.

There appeared to be no motive for the murders, the American consul at the Lower California resort told the girl's relatives. They apparently were strolling along the beach when their slayer crept up on them.

Mr. and Mrs. John De Wild, of Vista, Calif., who started for Ensenada with the young couple, were located today by San Diego authorities. They reported that they turned back below Ti Juana on Monday in the belief that Conlon and his fiancee also had returned.

Miss Kentle was president for two years of the National Phi Nu sorority chapter of the University of California at Los Angeles. She was prominent in alumni affairs.

FARM CENTERS TO DISCUSS DIVISION

A business meeting of the Fullerton-Placentia Farm center will be held at 7:30 p. m. today at the chamber of commerce hall at Placentia. The meeting will be held to discuss a proposed plan to divide the organization into two centers.

J. A. Priser, president of the Placentia-Fullerton district, will act as chairman of the meeting. Another problem which will be discussed in connection with the proposed segregation of the two districts is the question of distributing their funds. E. E. Campbell, president of the Orange County Farm bureau, J. W. Crill, vice president, and R. D. Flaherty, executive secretary, are to represent the Orange County Farm bureau at the meeting.

LONGER SKIRTS AND CROONING ALTER DANCING

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27.—(UP)—The popular Terpsichore is undergoing a reform, according to a consensus of opinion among Cleveland dancing instructors.

The American dance hall, which for years has been the scene of the Charleston, the Black Bottom, the Bobby Jones, the Bunny Hug and others of similar character but more recent origin, will soon have witnessed a complete transformation that will bring back dances of lithe, swaying, graceful movements forgotten during the heyday of King Jazz, teachers say. Already the transformation has begun with dance hall habitues doing a shuffling, aimless routine much unlike that of its recent predecessors. This uncertainty of movement is interpreted as a wavering on the part of young America to adhere to the old steps or to develop new ones along similar lines. The shuffling routine, in turn, is predicted to succumb to a new one which will be bred in grace, symmetry, and a certain air of stateliness, instructors aver.

New modes of dress and the growing popularity of the ballad are ascribed as responsible for the change. According to Walter U. Soby, secretary-treasurer of the Dancing Masters of America, long skirts assume the credit.

"When the flappers first put on long skirts last fall," Soby opines, "they tried to cavort just as they had with short skirts. They galloped around the dance floors and that wasn't becoming in long dress. The girls didn't look cute. Cutting-up in short skirts and boyish form silhouettes was a different proposition. Pretty soon the brighter girls began to catch on. They realized that to make the exciting new styles effective, they would have to change their manners."

The growing popularity of crooning through the medium of the radio, wrought an effect upon dancing, as well as new stateliness in dress, in the belief of Miss Margaret Gibbons, principal of the Ohio Dancing Teachers association.

"Crooning has very slow rhythm," is the way she explains it. "It's soft and sentimental. Strangleholds and galloping just do not match up with it. With the long dresses to make the girls look dignified and sweet and music to make them feel that way, the rough-handed gyrating shieks have been forced out of fashion."

STUDIO PREVIEW AT FOX BD'WAY HOUSE TONIGHT

A studio review of Director Frank Borzage's latest all-talking Fox Movietone picture ,the first big preview to come to a Santa Ana theater in more than a year's time, will be shown at the Fox Broadway theater tonight at 8 o'clock, according to an announcement made today by Norman Sprowl, Fox theaters manager here.

"Santa Ana has long been off the list of cities to get the high class previews, because in the past, it has been ruined as a preview town, through the showing of so many 'fake' previews," Sprowl said today, in commenting on the picture to come here tomorrow night.

"It was through my efforts that we have been able to induce the Fox people to again come to Santa Ana with their big previews and I have reserved 50 seats at the theater for the executives of th ecompany and the actors in the show. I cannot name the picture as I do not know its name. I do know that it is the latest Fox production, never before shown and that the director is Frank Borzage, who directed "Seventh Heaven" and other of the famous Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell productions."

Santa Ana is to get other Fox previews in the future. according to Sprowl, who returned here from Los Angeles yesterday where he was in conference with Barney Wolf, Fox executive.

PRESIDENT HOOVER TO LIGHT BEACON

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. — (UP) — President Hoover will press a button in the White House at Washington at 9 o'clock tonight to light the world's most brilliant air beacon, which towers nearly 700 feet above the ground on the roof of the Palmolive building here.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, for whom the beacon has been named, was invited to attend the dedicatory ceremonies here, but it was unknown whether he would be present, Scores of famous aviators, here for the National Air races, will watch the beacon, which will guide them in future flights, come to light.

That certain colors may increase the strength of buildings is a theory advanced by an English scientist who has found that painting steel blue reduces the effect of the sun's rays on it.

REFUGEE FROM MEXICAN ARMY NOW RANCHER

TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 27.—There resides in this border town a rancher who has a good idea of how Napoleon felt when he was banished to St. Helena to ponder the vicissitudes of war.

He is the former General Francisco Robles Manzo, 260-pound exunder-secretary of war of Mexico, commander of Sonora and the conqueror of the Yaquis. Today, he is a political refugee from his native country.

In the 1929 Escobar rebellion, General Manzo served as commander of all rebel forces in northwestern Mexico. With the defeat of his army by the federals, he was driven across the international boundary, leaving behind him a fortune accumulated after years of labor in his home at Ortiz, Sonora, Mexico.

Despite his comparatively low estate here, the once noted military leader may look across the boundary of his mother country to a number of economic achievements which still stand as monuments in Ortiz to his enterprise. In making his escape, he left behind 5,600 head of cattle, a $25,000 light and power system, a modern water which he founded, extensive ranching interests, some 200 miles of improved highways in and adjacent to Ortiz, and modern barracks housing some 2,000 soldiers whom he commanded.

"Whatever glory that was once mine was wiped out in a moment," he said, smiling sadly. "But I still have my wife and four children and I am a good rancher—so perhaps I should not be despondent. There still may be brighter days ahead."

And the once highly honored federal officer, clad now in dungarees, goes about his work as any other Mexican laborer. And occasionally from his lips sound Mexican National anthems he loves so well. Incidentally, one of General Manzo's favorite historic characters is Napoleon.

"IRON POT" PROVES TO BE EGYPT RELIC

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 27.—(UP)—W. H. Long scrubbed viciously at a blackened iron vessel which he believed to be an iron pot, probably used by early American pioneers. He had purchased it in an obscure junk shop here.

The black coating proved to be asphalt. As it fell away strange designs were revealed. The vessel was of copper and was covered with symbols. Long took it to Edward Butts, curator at the museum at the public library.

Butts was amazed. He traced out a design of the sphinx with a tail, historical symbols and a Hebrew inscription translated as the dying words of Jacob to his son.

"It is a rare thing," Butts said. "It undoubtedly was made in Egypt during the time of the Pharaohs, long before the Christain era."

The pot, which by some unexplained distribution had found its way through the years, was sent to eastern museum curators for closer classification.

Black fog occurs at sub-zero temperature and appears to be a precipitation of heavy semi-fluid water particles which seem to absorb the sun's rays.

TRYING TO ESCAPE NEW YORK HEAT

Here's what happens when New Yorkers try to escape from crowds on a torrid day by going to the beach. The scene's at world-famous Coney Island, where more than a million hot, perspiring residents of America's largest city swarmed along the shore the other day—and found their neighbors there, too, each on his own grain of sand! Other beaches in the New York area presented similar pictures during the recent nation-wide heat wave.

FUR CENTER IN CHINA RUINED BY BIG TAXES

PEIPING, Aug. 27. — (UP)— Ruination of Kalgan, on the Sino-Mongolian border, once the active center of fur-buying in the Far East, is reported by the few fur-buyers who have visited the place this year. China's civil wars and excessive taxes, combined with the Outer Mongolia recently declare ports to China, are responsible for deterioration of Kalgan.

Five years ago, the fur-buyers declare, Kalgan in the summer was almost a resort, filled with foreign and Chinese fur-buyers. This summer it has languished, with practically no visitors.

At that time there ware 60 tanneries in Hsuanhuafu, near Kalgan. By last year, the number had dwindled to 30, and this summer there were only 12.

Foreigners who have visited Outer Mongolia recently declare that vast area is under domination of Soviet Russia, and an embargo has been imposed on trade with China proper, in order to divert the fur trade through Harbin to Vladivostock.

The embargo is not so serious, however, as innumerable taxes imposed in North China, make it impossible for traders to compete in the world fur market. Twenty-eight separate taxes are now collected on goods brought from Kalgan to Tientsin. Most of these taxes are "illegal," according to agreements with foreign countries, but protests have no effect in abolishing them.

Taxes change from day to day, so that traders cannot compute in advance what they will have to pay. This uncertainty virtually has killed the trade.

Trees Also Suffer From Bad Sun Burn

STAMFORD, Conn., Aug. 27. — (UP).—Scientists have known for a long time that trees eat, sleep, digest, freeze and strangle themselves after the manner of humans. Now comes forward the Bartlett Tree Research laboratories of this city to state that trees suffer from sun burn.

"Sun scald," as it is called, is caused by the directing wilting and drying out of bark tissues caused by excessive heat. Low humidity and the drying action of the wind contribute to the sunburn as well as the sun's rays.

Late News From Orange And Nearby Towns

4000 BOTTLES OF MILK DRINK MADE EACH DAY

ORANGE, Aug. 27.—Making a specialty of a malted milk drink, Gordon Dry, Inc. of 168 North Orange street, is turning out from 4000 to 6000 bottles of drink daily, keeping 10 large distributing companies in Southern California supplied.

The Orange bottling concern has been organized for five years but until one year ago, manufactured a complete line of carbonated drinks. At the later date, the firm cut down to only two products, Gordon Chocolate and Gordon Dry gingerale and since that time, has increased the output to the full capacity of the plant.

The newest machinery has been installed to take care of the increasing orders for the malted milk drink. A bottle washing machine turns out 24 bottles a minute and a conveyer takes the battles through the filling machine, which fills the bottles and caps them in one operation. This machine has a capacity of 6000 bottles a day or 250 cases.

From the filling machine, the battles are taken to the giant sterilizing plant, which holds 52 cases at one time. After the liquid is heated and cooled off in this process, it will keep indefinitely. The gingerale is not being pushed at the present time, it was learned from Leon Shadel, manager, because the Gordon chocolate drink is so popular, but 200 cases are made a week.

The Orange firm distributes the drink to three plants in Los Angeles, and one in Santa Ana, Long Beach, Pomona, San Bernardino, San Diego and the Imperial valley. Each distributor has his own bottles but the trademarked cap is used on all bottles.

From two to five barrels of dry milk are used each week and is mixed with 100 to 150 pounds of malted milk and 1200 pounds of sugar. The dry milk and malt are mixed in the powder form into a syrup. In the filling machine, the bottle is first half-filled with syrup and then the other half with water.

The bottling company buys caps from San Francisco, 20,000 gross at a time, or 2,880,000 caps. For the gingerale bottles, elaborate caps and labels are prepared and applied in a special machine. An embossed label is put on the side and neck of the bottle while the top is sealed with gold foil. The bottles are green.

A large amount of water is used in the process of bottling while $40 worth of gas and $25 of power are used each month. All water is chemically treated before being used in a complicated machine, while a carbonator is used for the gingerale.

Among the interesting things at the plant operated by Leon Shadel and C. R. Smith is a collection of bottles and special labels. The plant has also experimented with flavors in the chocolate drinks, but further work in this line had to be postponed to take care of the orders on the plain chocolate product. Five men work to put out the popular drink.

ORANGE JAUNT 43 YEARS AGO IS DESCRIBED

ORANGE, Aug. 27.—A clipping from a Los Angeles paper of September 20, 1887, was recently placed in the hands of a daughter of a pioneer family of Orange. The article follows:

"Some weeks ago Major Jones announced to the council that an invitation had been extended to its members to visit the Palmyra hotel at Orange, and on the 12th instant the council determined to accept, setting Wednesday of this week as the time of the visit. Although many of the councilmen had visited Orange before, yet more of them had an idea that their visit was to be one continual round of pleasure, and it was with some misgivings that they, in company with their wives and friends, gathered at the Commercial street depot at half past 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. When the long train of cars drew up in front of the depot, and it was observed that attached thereto was the parlor car, "T. W. Pierce," which had been placed at the service of the party, it became evident that the occasion was not one of ordinary interest, but that it had been designed by one whose apparent effort was to give his invited guests every opportunity to enjoy their brief holiday in such a manner as would not be forgotten.

"The special car was fitted up with an elegance of design that reminded all of their own drawing-room, and it was difficult for anyone to conceive that after all it was only a car bearing them to a portion of the country of whose recent growth they know little. Traveling in such a car shortened the time between that city and Orange, and before they realized the fact that they were traveling the car was sidetracked at the station, and headed by the President of the Council L. N. Breed and Mrs. Breed, the members of the party found themselves whirling rapidly in carriages along roads on which the dust had been settled by the showers of the early morning. There were in the carriage, Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Breed, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Miller, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frankenfield, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eaton, Mrs. Dr. J. C. Hall of Charleston, Ill., C. Williard, Miss J. A. Gavitt, Miss A. L. Gavitt, F. L. Stearns, Mrs. M. Snyder, M. Todd, A. L. Teal.

"As the above ladies and gentlemen stepped forth from the car they were met by Mr. C. Z. Culver, to whom all were indebted for one of the most pleasant occasions in the history of their lives. Mr. Culver received the guests with a cordiality which placed everyone at ease, and indicating that he had provided carriages, invited all to enter therein. By this time it was a trifle after 6 o'clock, and the duskness of night had commenced to lend its aid in making the surrounding country appear in its most romantic light. As the numerous carriages with their loads of humanity were whirled along the tree lined roads, turning here and there in directions unknow before, it became apparent that wherever the Palmyra hotel might be, the surrounding country was not to be excelled anywhere on the face of the globe. Shortly before 7 o'clock, the hotel, with its every window lit up by unseen gas jets, appeared in close proximity and from the drawing room stole forth strains of music, which foreshadowed the hospitality of Mr. Culver and the manager, J. J. Martin, who with his wife stood waiting at the door to welcome guests. As soon as the visitors had alighted and walked up the pathway to the entrance they felt that they were welcome, and acting in accordance with those feelings were prepared to enjoy every moment of the time which they had set aside for that purpose.

"They were immediately shown to rooms, where they removed all stains of travel,, and it was at this time that they were able to observe with what elegance and taste the Palmyra had been furnished. And not only did the fittings appeal to their artistic nature, but under the gas light the bright blooms and green foliage which had been arranged by tasteful fingers, gave to the general appearance, such an air of warmth that, hungry as they were, the guests became possessed of a feeling of freedom such as had not been experienced for years. Anticipating the arrival of the councilmen and the ladies, Mr. Culver had prepared a banquet which not only satisfied the pangs of hunger but made them wish for a frequent repetition of the occassion. The dining room was thrown open shortly after the guests arrived, and again led by Mr. and Mrs. Breed, the ladies and gentlemen were escorted to the tables set with snowy linen and bright silverware."

President D. F. Campbell was in charge of the directors' meeting.

According to association officials, the audit of the firm is nearly complete. This was made necessary after charges had been made that an employe had misappropriated funds.

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

The fate of Aline Everett, accused of the murder of her ranch manager, Mortison, is in the hands of the jury, after a trial in which Emil Kurtner, criminologist, has given expert testimony that Mortison had been running or exercising violently just before he was shot while he was seated at a table. Kurtner bases his statement on a chemical analysis of blood of the dead man on a handkerchief belonging to Peter Piper, a newspaper reporter, who was on a vacation in the Sierras, who was the first person at the scene of the murder, with the exception of Mrs. Coak, the ranch housekeeper, who found the body.

Kurtner's testimony also establishes the fact that the two shots in Mortison's body were fired from different guns. He testifies that he believes Mortison was already dead when Aline fired a bullet which entered his lungs. The other bullet severed the manager's jugular vein. The first bullet fired by Aline, which went wild, is found by Peter in the garden.

Others involved in the mystery are Max Everett, Aline's husband; her sister Marjorie, who left the ranch the day of the tragedy and who has sailed for Europe; Julio, the Everett's sheepherder, in love with Mrs. Coak's daughter who has been wronged by Mortison, and an old man who declares he is glad Mortison is dead, as he believes that he practiced witchcraft.

Everett in spite of the accusations that she was in love with Mortison, has never lost faith in his wife. He paces the courthouse grounds while the jury is deliberating.

CHAPTER 23

The suspense that had wound its tightening coils around Max Everett with every turn across the court room choked him with intolerable pain as he recognized Peter's slouching figure. The strain of that tension reached the breaking point as he caught Peter by the arm.

"What are they doing? Aren't they ever coming?" He tried to wet his lips but the words came in a husky whisper from his dry throat.

"Hells bells, isn't somebody looking after you?" Peter whirled him to the light and lifted a startled gaze to Max's drawn face. "Come along." Max obeyed the pressure of Peter's firmly guiding hand dwo nthe aisle to the door at the rear of the courtroom, scarcely conscious of his movement.

"Don't you know," Peter assured him, "that every minute after the first half hour the jury is out makes a verdict of guilty more unlikely? If they're going to convict on a capital charge, they'll do it right off. If they've got to talk it over all night, they're uncertain. And with that uncertainty, they'll never agree unanimously to impose the sentence for murder." Peter did not confide his own growing fear that the jury would "hang," and the whole case be thrown into a second trial. Nothing ruined a murder story like the anti-climax of a re-trial, he told himself, unwilling to admit that his anxiety was less for the story than for the persons who made it.

"What you need is a stiff drink, but I hate to leave you and go to get it," Peter said as they stood on the shadowed porch of the court house.

Max shook his head.

"No," he said. "I don't want that that kind of help." Max had once fallen from a high piece of machinery, dislocating his knee. There were no anaethetics in the construction camp, and his face, as the doctor jerked the joint back into place, had held the same set look which it wore now.

Peter sat down on the wooden steps, leaning against a pillar, and drew Max down beside him.

"Then the next best thing is to talk. It doesn't matter what you say—it won't go any farther—but cut loose, let yourself go. Dig it all out into the open, and let's have a look at it. It's the things you can't bear to look at that hurt most."

"Did you know that Aline had a baby once—and lost it?" Max said unexpectedly. "I've been reminded of that lately. I had to sit there, doing nothing, while she went through it alone. There weren't a darn thing I could do. I couldn't take a single minute of her pain to carry for her. She had wanted that baby so; and then she went through hell—for nothing. I couldn't talk about it afterwards. I hadn't the right—I, who'd gone scot free, while she—"Peter could not see Max's face in the darkness, but he heard the thud of his fist on the step beside him.

"I tell you there's nothing Aline could do—nothing!"—that I would not put in the scale against those hours. Doesn't she know that?" The low voice was sharp with anguish. "And now again—I've just had to sit there doing nothing. Doesn't she know I want nothing on earth so much as to share it, to take it on myself—if I could?"

"That's the devil of it. Nobody can do that, ever." Peter cursed the banality of his words, but Max seemed scarcely to have heard him. His figure was a brooding shadow in the darkness. When he spoke again, after a long silence, his voice was controlled and steady.

"There's so much that Aline doesn't realize," he said meditatively. "Do you know what she said to me when the jury went out and I walked over to the jail with her? The sheriff is a good man—he dropped back and let us have those moments together. She said, 'I've caused you a lot of trouble, Max. I suppose it's silly to say I'm sorry.' Her voice was shaking, but she smiled at me—like a child trying hard not to cry. She said, 'If I—if I should get out of this, I'll try not to cause you any more. But I seem to be a good deal like the sparks—you know, the ones that just naturally fly upward and are born to trouble.' She tried to laugh. It was the most pitiful sound I ever heard. Then, when it's too late, I'm sorry. Much good that does!' she said.

"What could I tell her? What could I say when I couldn't think of a thing except what the jury at that moment was doing? We were both helpless now. If only I could be in the room with them and hear what they were saying! But we couldn't even do that. We just had to wait—to wait.

"We'd reached the steps of the jail then and I heard something clatter on the pavement. It was Aline's beaded bag. The sheriff stopped and pick it up, but he did not hand it to her. He just strolled over to the corner of the building and stood there, picking dead leaves off the ivy, with his back turned towards us. The bag had dropped because she had reached out with both hands and gripped my arms.

"'We're not in their power!' she said, and I knew that she too was thinking of the jury. 'It doesn't matter what they decide—not really. They're like the things in the jungle. They can destroy me if they like, but they can't make me yield. They can't say that I whined or begged. I have asked nothing from them—nothing. If they are too stupid to see the truth, we can't help it. Don't you see, it doesn't matter what they say, when at last I know—we both know—that I'm not guilty?'

"I can't describe the look on her face. It was so—so utterly unafraid and, somehow, exalted.

"'They can't touch that,' she said.

"I suppose it's true, in a way. But they can send her to prison, for all that. Aline—in prison! And she asked me to think it didn't matter, because she's not guilty of murder. Why, I don't care whether she's guilty or not! I'd a thousand times rather know that she killed him, if that would make sure of her freedom!"

"Well, whatever else happened, she didn't kill him." Peter strove to make his tone at once assured and casual. But Max brushed aside the interruption. The big figure sitting crouched on the step stirred impatiently.

"I only wish," he said wistfully, "that she could have told me what it's all about. I'd have tried hard to understand."

Peter's lifted hand was poised in mid-air, half way to his pipe. The match flared in his fingers. His voice was studiously non-committal.

"You don't believe—what she told?"

"I don't know what to believe. But perhaps I could have helped—if I knew what really happened. I don't know—and I shall never ask. That's the least I can do."

"I'm going to find out!" The impulse to immediate action lifted Peter to his feet.

"Do you think she wants you to?" Max's tone was level. In its careful lack of emphasis Peter read the depth and torture of his doubt.

"I've got to find out who really did kill Mortison—it's becoming a regular complex with me!" Peter's tone was purposely flippant. "I think it's a matter that ought to be cleared up—shall we say, for the sake of the Herald?"

"You think she doesn't know?" Despite his attempt at concealment, Max's voice shook with a half-incredulous hope.

"I'm sure she doesn't know any more about that than you or I do," Peter answered positively. "But if that's the way you feel about it, we've sure got to pull it all out into the clear. I'm going to ask you to stand back and let Mrs. Everett and me work it out between us."

"You mean—it's true—what the district attorney said about her?" Max pushed out the words with difficulty, one by one.

"I mean nothing of the sort!" Peter cursed himself for the ghastly ineptitude of his last words. "I mean that she was on the spot, and saw enough of Mortison, naturally, to know a good deal more about him than you do." The anger dropped out of his voice as he added earnestly: "I'm going to talk it over with her and see what we can collect. I'm giving you a hard job when I ask you to kep out of it. But I will tell you this. There is nothing in life—nothing—that means as much to Aline as your confidence. Your faith in her, or what she thinks is your faith, has been the one thing she's held to."

A broad beam of light was suddenly flung over their shoulders from the window behind them.

"The jury's in!" Peter exclaimed. He leaped to the door, but paused with his hand on the knob. Max had risen also, and stood facing the closed door, his hands clenched at his sides.

"That isn't the only door that has to be opened," Peter said softly. "Are you afraid?"

"Yes,' 'Max breathed. "God knows I'm afraid. But not Aline. There's just one thing I can be eternally sure of—her courage. I don't know what to believe of her—but don't tell her that. Tell her—tell her that her courage is worth the best I can give. Tell her I've never doubted her for one moment!"

COLTON SERIES BEGINS FRIDAY

Heavyweights Head Delhi Ring Card

JACK HAYWOOD FACES PERTLEY IN MAIN BOUT

Jack Haywood, giant Pasadena negro and one of the hardest-hitting heavyweights in Southern California, makes his first appearance at the Orange County Athletic club tomorrow night when he lines up for a six-round set-to with Vic Pertley, another 200-pounder, in the main event of Promoter H. T. Foust's 34-round "bargain bill."

Haywood has been a main-eventer at Pasadena for two years and occasionally a performer at the Olympic or Hollywood, but has never shown before the clients at Delhi. He has met some of the best known heavies, Mack House, Ernie Owens, Tony Fluente and Vic Alexander included, and will be a favorite to take the measure of Pertley.

The latter is a youngster of considerable promise who boxed at the Delhi arena several months ago.

Promoter Foust plans to use the winner against "Dynamite" Jackson, widely known and highly touted young colored fighter, in a main event next month. Jackson already is under contract.

The Haywood-Pertley affair is only one of seven bouts—three six-rounders and four four-rounders.

A preliminary which Promoter Foust believes will outshine most any battle that ever has been waged in Orange county is the four rounder matching "Wild Man" O'Hannigan and Benny Stinson. O'Hannigan is from Santa Barbara and comes described as the latest thing in battling comedians. Stinson is the young La Habra 155-pounder who has shown unquestioned promise in previous Delhi appearances. O'Hannigan and Stinson met at San Bernardino last week and waged such terrific warware that Foust immediately rematched them.

Other preliminaries are Jack Dunseith, Alhambra, vs. Glen Thompson, Seattle, 175 pounds; Max Hernandez, Anaheim, vs. Johnny Todd, Los Angeles, 160 pounds; Getzell Hood, Los Angeles, vs. Eddie Reinhart, Los Angeles, 175 pounds.

Once again women will be admitted to the arena free if accompanied by escorts holding tickets for the reserved sections.

'Hack' Wilson Threatens Ruth's Record

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Having accomplished the feat he has been attempting for four years—the breaking of the National league all-time home run record—"Hack" Wilson, Chicago Cubs outfielder, today turned his attention to the difficult task of lifting Babe Ruth's home run crown.

Wilson's 44th homer of the 1930 season, made in the seventh inning of yesterday's game with Pittsburgh, shattered the National league record of 43 made by "Chuck" Klein of the Phillies in 1929, and tied "Hack" with Babe Ruth in the number of homers made this season.

BRITISH, U. S. TRACKSTERS IN BIG DUAL MEET

BY DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Corespondent)

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Track fans from all sections of the country gathered here today for the "Little Olympics"—A dual track and field meet between the British empire and the United States—to be contested tonight at Soldiers' field.

The meet is the first international track and field competition held in the United States since the 1906 Olympic Games at St. Louis, and has attracted widespread interest.

More than 25,000 tickets have been sold and promoters are hopeful that Soldiers' field, which already holds the world record for attendance at prizefights and football games, will house a record track and field crowd.

The British empire-United States meet is second only to the Olympic Games in athletic importance and quality of competition and a program which carries all the color and pageantry of an Olympiad has been arranged for the meet.

Assistant Secretary of State William P. Castle jr., representing President Hoover, will open the meet formally with an address of welcome to the visiting athletes. Following his talk, the athletes,led by an American Legion bugle and drum corps will parade around the track and raise the flags of the two countries. Then buglers, stationed on the highest point of the collandes rising above the brilliantly lighted stadium, will trumpet the call for the opening event and competition will begin.

Fourteen events and a special 100-yard exhibition dash, which will not count in the scoring, are included on the program. All track events will be contested as relays and the field events will be decided on the basis of team scores. Best performances of all competitors being totaled to decide the winner.

TO BROADCAST BOXING MATCH BY TELEVISION

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—An innovation in athletic attractions will be presented tonight when for the first time in history, a boxing bout will go on the air by television.

The principals, "Tuffy" Griffith, middlewestern heavyweight contender, and Stanley Harris, of Chicago, will fight in the WMAQ radio station studio with their handlers and studio attendants as the only witnesses.

Their exhibition will be part of WMAQ and WXAP, the new telethe television sound broadcast over gram, which will be on the air Chicago Daily News. The provision broadcasting station of the Standard Time, will mark the befrom 7 to 7:30 p. m., Central ginning of regular television broadcasts over WXAP.

For the benefit of listeners not equipped with television receiving sets, a blow-by-blow description of the contest will be announced.

BUFFALO MAN LEADS

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 27.—(UP)—Frank Pritchard, of Buffalo, led the 172 men and one woman entered in the annual Canadian natioal exhibition 15-mile swim today at the start of the secod lap. He was repeating history in leading the pack at the start. In previous marathons, Pritchard has taken the lead and then fallen back, never sharing in the $15,000 prize money.

AL HITS INTO DOUBLE PLAY

Maybe Dan Cupid has traded his bow and arrow for a baseball bat. Anyway, soon after the world's series is over, Al Simmons, hard-hitting outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Miss Dorothy Kuhn of Jenkintown, Pa., are to be married. This is the first picture taken of them since the announcement of their engagement.

CHAMPIONS TO STAGE OPENER IN BOWL HERE

Santa Ana and Colton will begin their playoff for the Southern California night baseball championship in the Santa Ana Bowl Friday night.

Representing the National and American lunar leagues, the Stars and Reds will engage in a four-out-of-seven game series.

The second game will be played at Colton next Tuesday, September 2, the third at Santa Ana Friday, September 5, and the fourth at Colton Monday, September 8.

Other games, if necessary, will be held at Santa Ana, Wednesday September 10; at Colton Friday, September 12, and at a park to be decided Monday, September 15.

Arrangements were consummated at a meeting in the offices of the state traffic department in the courthouse here last night.

Cravath Presides

"Gavvy" Cravath, president of the Southern California association, presided. Representatives included Elmer Coble, president of the American Night league; George Peterkin, president of the National Night league, and Hubert Finley and John Wilcox, business managers of the Colton and Santa Ana clubs.

Tickets for reserved seats to the series opener went on sale here today at the El Corral service station, Third and Birch streets, and at Baker's bakery, 214 West Fourth street.

"Eeny" Wilcox and Horace Snow, officials of the local club, are handling the ticket sale.

The main bleacher sections, the "old" stands, will be reserved with pasteboards available at 35 cents. The "new" temporary bleachers will not be reserved. Admittance to them will be 25 cents.

Seating Capacity 3000

The entire seating capacity at the Bowl is approximately 3000.

Colton will have virtually as many, it is understood.

In charging 35 and 25 cents, Santa Ana officials may precipitate a quarrel with the Southern California association which insists on a 50-cent "top." The Southern California association receives 25 per cent of the gross receipts for all games during the series.

Having had its tickets for the first game already printed, Santa Ana proceded to put them on sale today at its own prices. The Stars maintain they have a right to charge whatever they want at their own park. They also argue that their lease with the city for use of the Bowl expressly states that not more than 35 cents shall be charged for any game.

Colton Speeds Additions

Work is being rushed at Colton on additions to the municipal baseball grounds.

Three tiers have been added to the top of the present bleachers. A 110-foot section has been added, providing permanent accommodations for 2100 fans. Portable bleachers seating 1000 more will be moved from the Riverside park for the Santa Ana series.

Santa Ana will be alloted approximately 600 tickets for the second game of the series at Colton next Tuesday. These will not be available until Saturday morning, however.

Umpires for the series will be J. Wilson and R. Smith, premier guessers of the inland loop, and "Shorty" Smith and W. B. Wentz, ranking officials from the National circuit.

INCREASING INTEREST

JAPAN, Aug. 27.—Aviation in Japan is increasing in interest by leaps and bounds. The Japan Air Transport has recently purchased new planes to add to the Tokyo-Darien and Fukuoka-Shanghai air lines. The present number of ships on the line is 20, and the additional planes had to be purchased to carry the growing number of passengers.

LEGALIZED BOXING HIT HARD BLOW BY CAMPBELL'S DEATH: BAER IS FORGIVEN BY WIDOW

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—The death of Frankie Campbell, one of the most promising heavyweights on the Pacific Coast, following his bout with Max Baer, resulted today in rumors that legalized prize fighting in California might suffer as a consequence. According to Dr. Tillman, a brain specialist who attended the fighter, Campbell's brain was knocked loose from his skull.

Baer, a 21-year-old boxer who has been spoken of as a possible contender for heavyweight championship honors, retired to his home in Livermore after being released on bail of $10,000 furnished by the fight promoter, Ancil Hoffman.

The bail was the highest ever set in San Francisco for manslaughter, with which Baer was charged.

Baer was deeply affected by the result of the contest.

"Of course I wanted to win. Before the battle it seemed like the only thing in life. But I didn't—I couldn't guess that such a terrible thing as this could happen."

Campbell's widow forgave Baer for the terrific blows that sent her husband into a state of unconsciousness from which he never returned when she said. "It's all right boy. You didn't mean to do it."

Independent investigations were started today by the state athletic commission and police. They planned to question all persons connected with the fight, including Toby Irwin, referee, who it was claimed had been exhorted to stop the fight before Campbell lost consciousness.

The bout scheduled for 10 rounds ended suddenly in the fifth when Campbell sank to the floor. Up until then it was a savage fight that swept the spectators back into an earlier and more savage age.

Baer hit Campbell a terrific blow in that round that sent the smaller fighter staggering against the ropes. But he didn't go down. Instead he stood there helplessly, his arms at his side, while the "Livermore Larruper" rained one terrific punch after another to his face and body. Finally, after what seemed hours to the startled spectators, the victim's legs collapsed and he sank slowly to the floor—knocked out.

AFRICAN AIR LINE

PARIS, Aug. 27. — French and Belgian air officials are arranging an air line to reach into the heart of Belgian Congo. This line will carry mail and will be a weekly scheduled affair. It is planned to add passengers and express to the line later. The route will be from Antwerp to Brussels, Paris, Perpignan, Algiers, Gao, Lake Tchad, Fort Lamy and Elizabethville. The service is expected to be extended to Madagascar in the future.

CANZONERI IN POOR SHOWING AGAINST HESS

BY HYPE IGOE
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Goldie Hess, of California, didn't go anything in the way of an 18-karat victory over Tony Canzoneri at the Queensboro stadium last night but he did put an awful kink in Tony's ambition to be the next lightweight champion of the world.

He lost the decision to Tony in ten rounds but Tony lost caste. Tony went so dog-tired trying to spill the unspillable gold one, that they had to give Tony smelling salts when he reached his dressing room.

Tony just did make the grade and he sent folks away vowing that he'll never go the distance with the bristling lightweight king, Al Singer.

Tony was a miserable exhibition. There is no use trying to play peek-a-boo behind that bare fact. He would have been duck soup for Suarez, Berg, Miller or Jimmy McLarnin last night.

It might have been that he was taking no chances with Hess, since he has that important job, on with Singer, but there was no excusing his weariness, his listlessness. He'll be knocked out in three or four rounds by Singer if last night's work was the best he has left.

Hess, mind you, hopped on a train in California, was cooped up for four days, had four days work in a strange climate, took off 15 pounds, and still made Tony look like an ordinary challenger for the Singer tiara.

AIR FIRE FIGHTERS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—Forest fires which have so ravaged forests of the Pacific coast this year will find things a little harder when the aviation club to be organized by local fire departments gets under way. With a proposed membership of 250, the club will aid materially in combatting forest fires by spreading news of them and transporting fire fighters.

PLANE RIGHTS

BOSTON, Aug. 27. — Airplane pilots are perfectly within their own rights in flying over private property as long as they maintain a sufficient altitude to comply with U. S. Department of Commerce laws, the Massachusetts supreme court has decreed. The ruling resulted from a suit brought by a property owner who complained that planes flying over his land made too much noise.

NEW AND LIGHTER GOLF BALL TO BE ONLY ONE SOLD WHEN OLD TYPE SUPPLY EXHAUSTED

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(International News Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The really heinous nature of a ruling, by which a larger and lighter golf ball is to be placed in American circulation after January 1 next, was revealed for the first time today when it was admitted at the offices of the United States Golf association that no other ball is likely to be available to anybody after the dead line in question. As a matter of fact, this wasn't an admission exactly; it appeared to be a boast.

All of the leading manufacturers, it seems, are committed to making only the new 1.68 ball. It even is my understanding that they plan soon to stop turning out the old type of ball in the hope that in the meantime they exhaust the supply and leave no surplus when the bars go up.

Thus it appears that a regulation which everybody deemed to have been aimed mostly at the low-handicap and tournament player, is to be visited alike on J. William Chicklehead, who is improving right straight along and is liable to break 115 almost any day, the new ball, it is said, will do Chicklehead a lot of good, which statement only serves to confirm an impression I have held about America for some time.

They Know What's Best

It seems to be a country composed of 110,000,000 people—and those who know what is best for us.

The populace has only one effective rejoinder in this connection but it seems to suffice. It listens very attentively and then does what pleases its fancy.

In this case, its fancy does not appear to lean to larger and lighter golf balls. These have been available at most courses for upward of a year, yet I dare say that you see one of them being played to one thousand of the others. It is reasonable to assume, therefore, that the average American doesn't want what is best for him. He is fastidious and is very particular about what ball he misses his golf shots with.

As a matter of fact, the whole matter is a legislative stepchild that has been left on the American doorstep.

British Parentage

The child is of British parentage but its care and upbringing is to become strictly an American responsibility. They started it by asking us if we didn't wish a larger and lighter ball. We said yes, and this naturally pleased them immensely.

"That's fine," they replied, "because personally we don't want it at all."

So we are finding ourselves committed to an experiment, to which not even the authors are favorable: in fact, they have turned their backs upon it with marked hauteur and, having persuaded America that it is doing a big thing in a big way, they are prepared to go on hitting the old ball firmly and with much resolution.

I suspect, of course, that the problem, so typical of modern America, will be solved in the modern American way. The "bootleg" ball, pre-1930 stock right out of the old bicycle shop. Ought to have a brisk sale.

VON PORAT SIGNS

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Otto Von Porat will make his first appearance since his knockout by Young Stribling in a ten-round bout with Joe Lohman of Wisconsin at Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.

BUILDERS BUMP LEGION: TITLE RACE HOT NOW

The Santa Ana City Night Baseball league race is still as wide open as a gate.

Defeated, 7 to 3, by the Orange County Builders' exchange last night, the American Legion dropped from its perch atop the standings, and left half the teams in the league with a chance to sneak through to the wire first.

Ray Griset and John Willcutt shared the pitching burden for the Builders who won the championship for the first half of the split season and will meet the second half winner in a three-game titular series next month. The Builders have had a hard time getting started this half but flashed some of their early season form in turning back the powerful Legionaires.

Earl Jones started for the Veterans. The Builders got to him bright and early, and Bob Nelson had to finish the assignment.

The other half of the scheduled double-header between Peek's market and the Courthouse was postponed on account of the election.

The Pacific Telephone company meets the Eastern Oilers in the Bowl tonight. Both these teams are front flight contenders.

The box score:

HOOKS and SLIDES
by William Braucher

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

The report that Jim Bottomley is to be traded away by the Cardinals has stirred the fans, says Sid Keener in the St. Louis Star . . . Sid has been receiving letters protesting the proposed trade . . . the report of a trade started several weeks ago in New York . . . Reporters asked Bottomley about it . . . Jim is said to have replied, "Well, I guess I'm going to see my new manage r tomorrow" . . . since the Cardinals were leaving that night for Boston, it appeared Jim thought he was about to be peddled to Beantown . . . Sam Breadon has nothing to say about the report . . . it so happens the Cards have a promising first baseman named Collins playing with Rochester this season.

IT'S COMMERCE, ETC.

Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, unburdened himself of a few well-chosen remarks the other day about the crass commercial side of baseball.

It seems that some sinister souls had been hinting that Sam's policy of maving up Monday games in St. Louis and making them Sunday double-headers was "cheapening the game," At least Sim so implies. In reply, Breadon frankly admitted that baseball was "a big commercial project."

"Whose game am I cheapening when we play to 177,611 for eight double-headers this summer?" asked Sam. "Of course, if this franchise loses money on a season's play, then the salaries of the players must be reduced the following year.

"The double-headers have made money for the stockholders and the players. Besides that, it afforded extra entertainment and interest for the fans of St. Louis. If left to a vote of the fans, whether they wanted one game or two on Sunday, I am positive there would be a wide majority for the double-headers."

MAKES GOOD READING

Mr. Breadon's remarks will be read with interest by a great many people. It may be that there are some sordid enough to remember the little speech during the hot-stove season, when the matter of salaries and contracts for 1931 come up for discussion.

We are awaiting with pleasure Mr. Breadon's negotiations with one Burleigh Grimes, a pitcher who also has a keen commercial mind. We have just the faintest hunch that Mr. Breadon will not begin to learn about the financial side of baseball until he has a little talk with Mr. Grimes. For if there is anybody in baseball who knows what you're talking about when you speak of commerce, it's that same Grimes.

Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates used to think he knew something about the financial niceties of the game. That was until this spring, when he was rudely apprised of his own ignorance by this same Mr. Grimes. Barney, to be sure, is not alone. Other big league bosses have learned about money from Grimes.

HE TEACHES THEM

That's why Mr. Grimes has been something of a wanderer over the face of the baseball earth. Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, New York, Boston—baseball bigwigs in all these cities have been liberally educated by Mr. Grimes. The professor came, saw, demanded and went his way, leaving the chancellors of the exchequer gasping for breath. For Burleigh thinks of money in a big way.

This year Mr. Grimes' picture was put on the cover of a popular baseball record book. We haven't been told whether or not Mr. Grimes has seen this picture. But if he has, Mr. Breadon is sure to know about it, too. That picture and those double-headers ought to be worth at least a couple of thousand vulgar dollars. And a dollar in St. Louis looks just the same to the mercenary Mr. Grimes as four two-bit pieces in Pittsburgh. Mr. Grimes is funny that way.

SHOOTING with SHUTE
by DENNY SHUTE

What do you do when you are delayed until the foursome ahead of you gets off the green? Do you look down the fairway and plan in your mind what club you'll use and just how you are going to hit the ball?

Take this little tip I learned from watching Johnny Farrell, the National open champion in 1928.

When there is a delay in the game due to others in front of him, Farrell walks clear away from his ball and never gives it another thought. And he never once glances in the direction he must play the shot.

"Many shots are missed after a short delay," the former National Open champion says, "because you let your imagination go to work. You become impatient to move along and when finally you are ready, your swing is too fast. Mentally playing the shot several times during the delay nearly always is disastrous."

Next time you're on a crowded course, watch the impatient ones swinging their clubs or walking around nervously. Invariably they top the ball or hook or slice into the rough.

$604,034.23 Mailed To Anaheim Valencia Growers

250 CARS OF FRUIT SHIPPED IN FIRST POOL

ANAHEIM, Aug. 27.—Checks totaling $604,034.23 are being mailed out by the Anaheim Citrus Fruit association this week for the settlement of the first pool of the season to approximately 350 orange growers, with a net average of $3.46 to the grower, it was announced this morning by Manager Carl A. Monahan.

Two hundred and fifty carloads of valencia oranges have been shipped by the association, totaling 175,354 boxes. Three cars daily are being shipped.

Four pool shipments will be made during the season, which does not close until the middle of October.

No shipments have been made to foreign countries, Mr. Monahan stated, but local prices have held up exceptionally well considering the general condition of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurber have taken the Ann Carlson cottage on Monterey street for the present and expressed themselves as interested in the artistic life of Laguna and said that they could not be quoted too enthusiastically in praise of the climate and beauty of this city.

The Craftsman studio is one of the most important industries in this vicinity and perhaps reaches more parts of the country than any other. The New York representative, Howard G. Selden, was the man who recommended Mr. Thurber's coming here and expects to handle more and more of the home-made brass and copper art novelties made here for gift shops throughout the territory east of the Rocky mountains.

The work shop employs six men and three girls working full time to turn out the novelties which are ordered from every state in the union.

LAGUNA BEACH

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 27.—Mrs. George Gramlich, of Hollywood, wife of the noted tenor, is visiting Mrs. Frederick Elliott for a few days. Mr. Gramlich is studying in Berlin, Germany, at present. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, who have been spending the summer here with Mrs. Elliott's mother, Mrs. Ella June La Piere, will leave for their home in Santa Ana Sunday.

Ben Lindsay, of Denver, and party were visitors in Laguna Beach last week.

Mrs. Helen King, Los Angeles was a visitor here this week. She visited a number of the local gardens and stayed over night en route to San Diego. Her mother accompanied her on the trip.

James M. Spalding, vice president of Midwick Country club, Pasadena, and chairman of the Polo association, spent Saturday and Sunday in Laguna Beach with David Taussky.

Miss Eleanor Spencer writes from Chautauqua Park, Fairfield, Iowa, that her company is having a fine time and very successful tour. They have three engagements more at summer resorts before the season is over.

Mrs. Belle Armstrong has just returned from a wonderful round of visits and parties in Chicago, where she was the guest of her two sons, Clyde and Howard Savage, and her uncle. She found a position waiting for her on her return with the Dana Point company in charge of the office in Hotel Laguna.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiel G. Rider and David Tauszky were guests at dinner Sunday at the home of Mrs. N. Robbins and Miss Doris Robbins, of Santa Ana. Also of the party were Major and Mrs. Wellington and their father, of Lemon Heights.

Fred A. Heywood jr., grandson of Thomas Gilbert Nottage, was here on a visit. He attended Prunella and is one of the happy owners of an oil painting purchased at the auction at the Art gallery Saturday evening.

Mrs. Roy Purpus gave a bridge luncheon for eight Los Angeles and Laguna friends recently.

Federal Architect Makes Post Office Site Survey

DETAILS ABOUT BUILDING HERE ARE REVEALED

Preparatory to drawing plans and specifications for Santa Ana's $225,000 Federal building, E. B. Morris, of Washington, D. C., architect for the United States treasury department, today had completed a thorough investigation of the site on Bush street, between Sixth and Seventh street, on which actual construction probably will begin soon after January 1.

Morris was accompanied here by his young son and Harry B. Westgate, postmaster at Pomona. They conferred with Postmaster T. E. Stephenson of Santa Ana yesterday.

Construction of a $160,000 Federal building at Pomona will be carried on simultaneously with the Santa Ana work, the two operations having been combined, so Westgate was anxious to team up with Morris and Stephenson in investigations here.

Morris said that many of the large and handsome trees on the Santa Ana site would be preserved. The structure here will be two stories. A large basement, the entire first floor and some of the second will be devoted to the post office department. Suites on the second floor will be occupied by such as the agriculture department, income tax collector, United States bank examiner, post office inspector, and army and navy recruiting officers.

Morris reiterated previous announcements that the building contract will be let immediately after plans are drawn. He said the treasury department has many other projects ahead and is anxious to speed operations already on its program.

Approximately $200,000 is available for the actual building in Santa Ana. The original appropriation was $225,000. Part of this was exhausted in the purchase of the site which measures 250 feet on Bush street and is 150 feet deep.

AS AIR RACES OPENED AT CHICAGO

While roaring airplanes soared overhead, and thousands of spectators lined the streets, a colorful parade marked the opening of the 10th annual National Air Races at Chicago. Here you see a group of fair "pilots" aboard a unique float depicting the "Spirit of the Air."

SALOME VISION IS FEATURE OF BAND PROGRAM

On tomorrow's concert program to be presented in Birch park at 7:30 p. m., the Santa Ana Municipal Band is planning to feature a novel modern work, entitled "A Vision of Salome," by J. Bodewalt Lampe, according to D. C. Cianfoni, director of the popular local musical organization. This work, a descriptive fantasie, is imaginative, and programmatic in type.

A brief synopsis will prove of interest to lovers of the picturesque. Salome has been repulsed by John the Baptist after she has exhausted all her powers to enchant him. She appears before King Herod at his birthday feast. She dances at his request. Herod is pleased with her dancing and promises to grant whatever she may ask. Salome, still smarting under her repulse and urged by her mother, Herodias, asks for the head of John the Baptist. Herod, with great reluctance, grants her request.

The feast is over; the head of John is brought in a charger to Salome, whose revenge is now complete—for John, who would not as much as turn his head to look at her, shall now behold her in all her beauty. In her mad frenzy she caresses and kisses the head. She attempts to dance but is stricken with fear. She is terrified as she realizes the horror of what she has done. She is overwhelmed, abject, but a ray of hope flashes over her sinking soul; can she earn forgiveness by constant prayer and sacrifice? She swoons in a heap upon the floor.

Other numbers of special interest will include presentation of the pleasing overture, "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna" by Franz von Suppe, noted Belgian composer and conductor, who won sensational fame during his lifetime in the field of light opera, enjoying a vogue similar to that of Offenbach.

An appealing Oriental dance suite in three movements, the "Ballet Egyptian" by Luigini, modern French composer, who also won recognition during recent years in the field of operetta, will be heard, as well as another selection from light opera, "The Three Twins," by Horschna.

CAMPAIGN POST-MORTEMS

Most of us will now close the campaign issues with the good old self-evident declaration that the losers lost because they didn't get enough votes.

IT WAS A CLEAN CAMPAIGN, ALL BUT THE MUD-SLINGING.

And did you hear of the Laguna Beach lady who walked four blocks to the polls only to find out it was just a primary?

And the Placentia Democrat who thought he could vote for Al Smith?

NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL GOOD CANDIDATES AND POLITICAL CLUBS TO COME TO THE AID OF THEIR CREDITORS.

There's one thing certain, to win in Orange county you've got to put up a campaign and a good one, at that. We common folks must be shown, Missouri or no Missouri.

It's a great process, turning candidates into office-holders or also-rans, as the case may be. The socializing benefits of a political campaign are greater in a way than the public services to be rendered.

And the way the bitter political enemies the day before turn back into good friends the day after is simply wonderful! The reason of this is because in the heat of battle each one has stretched the truth a little and nobody likes company better than a liar. A little lying now and then is relished by the worst of politicians.

The only thing we miss in these California elections are the riots and fistic combats outside the polling places like we used to see in the bad old days of the saloon.

VIEWS OF THE NEWS

Another thing that takes the joy out of life of an automobile owner is the fact that the more the car costs the harder it is to find a place to park it.

A seventeen-year-old Rhode Island boy won the Thomas A. Edison scholarship over forty-eight other contestants, but the unfortunate part is that some champion tree-sitter will be remembered longer.

Mr. Hoover has appointed a commission to look into the matter of diminishing home-ownership. If it accomplishes anything it will have to recommend shutting down the automobile and radio factories, closing the beauty shops and miniature golf courses, and bringing back the good old five-cent hamburger.

THE "RUN-OFF"

You candidates who ran and lost,
We bid you now adieu;
It matters not how much it cost,
You're through!

To you who in the "run-off" got,
Take now this timely cue;
Don't think you're through for you are not,
You two!

The "run-off" will begin for fair,
In six weeks—even less;
And half of you will get the air,
I guess!

STUDY PORT DRAINAGE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 27.—Airport drainage, a problem that has proven difficult to solve, is the subject of much research by the American Engineering Builders' association and the council, the American Road Aeronautics branch of the U. S. Department of Commerce. Adequate drainage and surfacing of airports is essential, because faulty construction of these systems has been responsible for accidents to planes in landing and taking off in the past.

4-H CLUBS TO HOLD CONCLAVE IN SACRAMENTO

BY ERIC E. EASTMAN
Assistant Farm Advisor

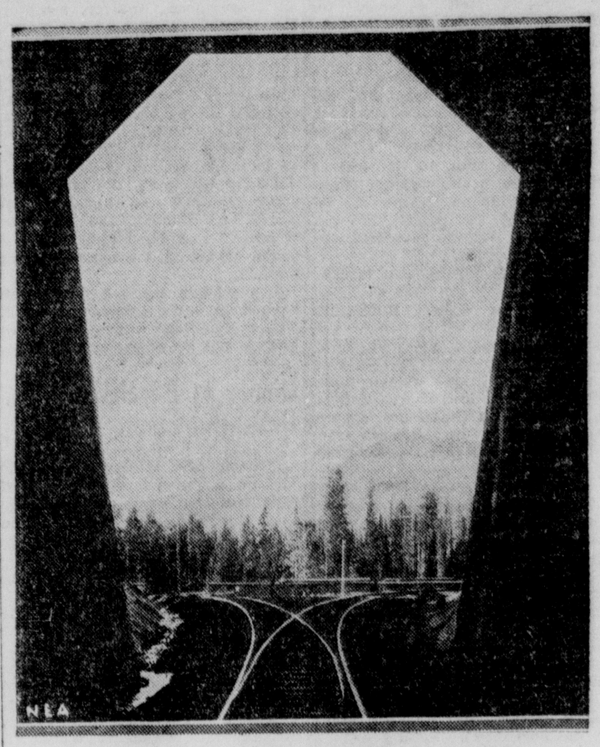
The Annual 4-H Club convention is to be held this year on the third, fourth and fifth of September at the University farm, near Davis, as usual. The club leaders from all parts of the county are busy selecting and preening their delegates so that the delegation may bring credit to the county. The selection this year is particularly difficult as the advanced date of the convention makes the selection of the project winners impossible, as most of the projects are still under way. Consequently the boy is being selected who in the opinion of the leader will not only profit from the educational opportunities of the trip himself but who will also bring back to his club the inspiration for more and better club work which he has acquired at the Davis convention.

The delegates are sent to the convention by the Farm bureau; interested parents and friends furnishing and driving their cars. The inland route is usually taken to the convention and the Coast Route on the return, so that the agriculture of both the interior valleys and the coast route may be observed. Stops are made at places of historic, as well as of agricultural interest. The Davis convention is one of the outstanding features of the 4-H educational work among rural boys and girls.

The tentative list of delegates from Orange county follow: Buena Park club: Robert Cole, delegate; Robert Thomas and Robert Smith, alternates. Costa Mesa: Clark Sneve, delegate; Philip Cassel, alternate. Clover Leaf club of Yorba Linda: Albert Yerington, delegate; Stanton Williams and Gilbert May, alternates. Yorba Linda Councilors: Donald Walker, delegate; Leonard Scott and Robert Carter, alternates. Fullerton club: Clarence Lotze, delegate; Lorin Lutschg and Frank Watts, alternates. Garden Grove club: Murray Jackson and Tyrus Chapman, delegates; John Chaffee and Keith Echols, alternates. Katella club: Joseph Hughes, delegate. Santa Ana club: Boyd Whitney, delegate; Billy Brooks and Alfred Eastman, alternates. San Juan Capistrano club: Robert Cook, delegate. Savanna club: Richard Clark, delegate; Edward Atwater and Carlos Foster, alternates. Tustin club: Robert Pankey, delegate; Charles Kiser, alternate. Villa Park club: Frank Christian jr., delegate. West Orange club: Reese Allison, delegate; Orlando Courtney and Howard Davis, alternates.

TUNNEL ENTRY ONLY EXIT

There is something new under the sun—a railroad tunnel with but one portal. And trains leave it by the same portal through which they enter; no train ever goes through it. It's engineering solution of a problem on Southern Pacific's Cascade line in southern Oregon. A turn-around was needed at this point. Odell lake was close to tracks on one side; the Cascade mountains on the other. So a tunnel was bored, a train goes in there on one segment of the "Y" track, and back out over the other, completely turned around.



SECRETARY PRAISES 2 PEACE DOCUMENTS

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—On the second anniversary of the signing of the Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war, Assistant Secretary of State Castle today hailed it and the London naval treaty as definite advances toward international peace, and sought to answer critics of both documents.

Speaking before a luncheon given by the Chicago World Peace Day committee, Castle forecast that when the London treaty expires five years hence the signatory nations will feel safe in making more drastic naval cuts.

Castle said the Kellogg pact and the naval treaty had been criticized by extremists on both sides—by Militarists, who considered the committments too binding and by Pacifists, who believed they were not thoroughgoing enough.

It has been found, by a large insurance company, that the home is positively the cause of the most number of non-fatal injuries.

Rolf McPherson Fails In Effort To Win Audience

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Rolf McPherson, son of Aimee Semple McPherson of Angelus temple fame, tried to emulate the soul saving propensities of his mother here last night with scant success.

A heterogeneous crowd of 1000 persons, mostly curious, gathered in the tent and listened apathetically while the youthful, long sideburned orator told how a "pitcher of joy was poured out upon my soul like ice water."

The address apparently touched them very little, however, for when young McPherson called for a show of hands from those who wanted him to pray for them. The audience simply stared.

Young McPherson read a telegram from his much publicized mother which he had received shortly before the meeting began. It read:

"Darling son—proud of you. Never touched mother. Face needed no lift. Stay at your post and fight the good fight of faith. Fraying for you."

Recall Visits Of Chaney to Former Register Employe

Many Santa Anans remember Lon Chaney as a nephew of Mrs. Kennedy Roberts, for many years society and telegraph editor of the Santa Ana Register. Chaney, in the days when the Roberts family lived on West Seventeenth street near Durant street, visited at the home of his relatives here.

Mrs. Roberts was with The Register for seven or eight years, and during her residence in Santa Ana was one of its most active and best known women. The family moved to Los Angeles about 15 years ago. Mrs. Roberts died a few months ago.

PRIZES GIVEN TO EXCHANGE CLUB GOLFERS

Despite the fact that the team entered by the Santa Ana Exchange club did not win the miniature golf match with a team from the Newport Beach Exchange club last Thursday, the local service club yesterday presented prizes to Dr. John Wehrly and Merle Morris, who turned in the low and high scores respectively. The presentation was made at the clubs' meeting yesterday noon in the Santa Ana cafe.

The beach players won three to two and today the Santa Ana team is anticipating a return match to be played at Newport Beach in the near future.

Harry Lewis was the speaker at yesterday's meeting and told experiences on his recent trip to South America. Kemper Taylor was in charge of the program and introduced Lewis. W. Lester Tubbs presided in the absence of Clyde Jenken, president.

INDIA COMMITTEE PLACED IN PRISON

NEW DELHI, India, Aug. 27.—(UP)—The entire Indian congress working committee was arrested today as the government struck again at the leadership of the home rule government.

The congress committee, which covers the organization of the Mahatma Gandhi's independence campaign, was taken into custody here and held in jail.

The Price Trend

There is no Better Indication of the trend of Commodity Prices than the present prices of Clothing

Take for instance Devonshire Suits. These are selling today with two pairs of pants for $35.00. The same suit in the same grade of fabric sold last year for $38.00 to $40.00—and two years ago for $38.00 to $40.00 WITH ONLY ONE PAIR OF PANTS.

Similar reductions in price are apparent in all lines connected with the clothing industry.

Vandermast's stocks in ALL DEPARTMENTS are now priced at the lower levels.

Yuma Wedding Is Revealed By Young People

A host of friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Poh jr., are today extending congratulations and good wishes, since they have learned of their romantic wedding which was an event of August 19 in Yuma, Ariz. Mrs. Poh was formerly Miss Alice Davenport, of this city, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reimie, while Mr. Poh is the son of a prominent Tustin family, Mr. and Mrs. William Poh sr.

The lovely Santa Ana girl made a charming bride in a graceful frock of green georgette fashioned modishly on long, flowing lines. There were no attendants at the wedding, which was one of quiet charm, and the Rev. W. S. Brown of the First Baptist church of Yuma officiated.

For the past two years Mrs. Poh has been employed in the office of Dr. W. F. Kistinger, and she plans to continue her work. Mr. Poh also is employed in this city. The young couple will be at home to their friends after September 1, and plan to establish their home at 607 East Walnut street.

Attend Luncheon In Los Angeles

Motoring to Los Angeles yesterday, Mrs. Elmer Burns, Mrs. George Safly, Mrs. Irwin Landis, and Mrs. Theodore Winbigler were among those sharing in the pleasures of a delightful day, planned for them by Mrs. H. Clement Dawes, formerly of this city, and her daughter, Mrs. Norman V. Grimsditch, who was Miss Roberta Dawes.

An interesting feature of the day was a visit to the home of one of the guests, where members of the group were shown a collection of art work, including exquisite carvings of wood. This visit was followed by luncheon at one of the delightful little tea-rooms of the city.

Cards in the Dawes home concluded the pleasant afternoon.

TUSTIN PEOPLE ARE HOME FROM TRIP ABROAD

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sam W. Nau, of Prospect avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Boyer, of Tustin avenue, Tustin, are glad to welcome them home from their travels which took them across the Atlantic into the most interesting and historic spots of the continent of Europe and the British Isles.

The group left Tustin in March, going directly to New York and landing in Plymouth, England. There they were greatly impressed by standing on the key point where the Pilgrims first departed for America, and which is marked by a tablet, commemmorating their departure.

In Cathedral Towns

Five weeks were spent in and about London, and other towns of England, where the picturesque beauty of the cathedral towns was especially appealing to the travelers. A three weeks' tour of these towns was made by motor. Of the different cathedrals, it was thought that Durham cathedral was the most beautiful.

The automobile tour also included the rest of the British Isles. The home of Robert Burns, in Scotland was visited and in Ireland the Tustin people motored along the beautiful rugged coast of that country. Conditions of the peasants were very low, it was noticed in Ireland, with the poorer classes barely eking out an existence from their farms. Wales was also visited during the tour.

Attend Passion Play

The party enjoyed a smooth crossing of the channel by boat, and went directly to Paris, where they spent a week. From Paris, they traveled to Munich, one of the most beautiful cities in Germany, and the nearest approach to Oberammergau. At Oberammergau, they witnessed one of the greatest of all masterpieces, The Passion Play. The play was seen from a large enclosed amphitheater, seating 5000 people, which faced an open stage on the north. The setting beyond the proscenium arch is a natural one and the spectator views the hills beyond, the small hamlets and villages, and the cows grazing in the pastures. The parts in the play are taken by the people of the village, who live the simplest of lives, in preparing themselves to take their roles in the play.

Nurnberg was the next town visited and from there the travelers motored to Vienna, often called the "Paris of Eastern Europe." They found Vienna one of the most delightful of cities and one where art treasures were seen on every side.

Budapest, located on the banks of the Danube river, varied from the other cities visited, in that it is in reality two cities, under one government, and separated only by the river, the members of the group found. Buda, situated on the bluff side, contains the palace, and is perhaps the more beautiful of the two sections, while Pest, across the Danube, is the commercial side. Bridges connect the two.

Visit Dresden

Prague, in Czechoslovakia, was another interesting city included in the itinerary and from that place they went to Dresden, another art center, located on the Elbe river. The Dresden china factory, for which the city is noted, was also visited. It is located, not in the town, but in a small village, Meise, which is 20 miles from Dresden.

The travelers found that the charm of Europe lay not only in its architecture and works of art, but in its many rivers and lakes. They found the old customs existing practically only in the country, among the peasants, while in the cities, modern methods were employed and where American influence could be noted.

The verdue-clad Bavarian Alps, which were viewed along the way, especially impressed the group, as they went to Berlin from Dresden. They found that most of the old royal palaces, formerly occupied by the ex-kaiser are now being converted into art museums. In Berlin, they rode down Unter den Linden, or avenue of the lindens, which is famous the world over.

Stockholm, another curious and beautiful city, was next visited. The Swedish city is built upon seven islands, all beautifully wooded, which are connected by bridges. The city is rapidly growing, and very picturesque. Sweden was toured by rail, until the party reached Lodingen, where they took a coast mail steamer for North Cape. The steamer stopped at all of the small fishing villages, giving the travelers an intimate glimpse of rural life. The small ports of Sweden, nestled at the foot of forested hills, reminded the travelers much of Oregon, they state.

At North Cape, the group landed, and climbed the cape, which is a sheer cliff 1000 feet in height, with a narrow zig zig path up the side. They were privileged to see the midnight sun for six successive nights. A brief visit was made in Russian Finland before stopping in Copenhagen, which was the home of Thorvaldsen, master sculptor. One of the greatest of his works, Christ and the Twelve Apostles, was viewed by the group. The reverence with which heroes are regarded is an especially vivid impression of the returned travelers. The many monuments and statues which are erected to them was noted in every country visited.

Among treasures, the group has many samples of hand woven scarfs and linens, and exquisite etchings and reproductions of works of art that interested them most.

The friends reached Tustin on August 15, after stopping in Iowa, where Mr. Nau visited relatives and old friends at his former home.

Lovely Wedding In Whittier Yesterday Is of Interest Here

Numbering among Orange County's college graduates are a host of Berkeley students who will be interested in learning of the wedding of their school-day associates, Miss Frances Rogers, charming daughter of Mayor and Mrs. W. O. Rogers, of Whittier, and B. Clyde Taylor, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Taylor, of Los Angeles. The lovely Rogers home in Whittier, decked with a glorious array of late summer flowers and ferns provided the setting for the affair, an event of yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. The Rev. E. E. Day, of that city, officiated.

The bride made a beautiful picture as she entered the room dressed in a creamy net frock fashioned with fitted bodice and long, full skirt. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lily of the valley. Preceding the couple's entrance, Mrs. E. E. Day played Schubert's "Serenade," following with Lohengrin's wedding march.

Following the ceremony, an informal reception was held, with the bride cutting an elaborately decorated wedding cake. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor then left immediately for Alhambra, escorted by relatives and friends, and from there went by airplane to San Francisco. The bride chose a smart little brown ensemble with harmonizing accessories for her going away outfit. The young people will leave San Francisco Friday on the "President Taft" for Cagayan, Mindanao, Philippine islands, where they will make their home for three years. Mr. Taylor will be employed there with the California Packing Corporation, superintending the culture of pineapples, as the company is developing 50,000 acres of this fruit there. For the past year and a half, Mr. Taylor has been affiliated with the same company and stationed at Honolulu.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are graduates of the University of California at Berkeley, where Mrs. Taylor received her Masters' Degree and Mr. Taylor specialized in agriculture.

Relatives of the bridegroom, Mrs. Jo Marshall and Charles L. Barkdull, of 1242 South Ross street, this city, were present at the wedding, and expect to be in San Francisco Friday, together with other relatives and friends to bid Mr. and Mrs. Taylor bon voyage on their long journey.

A shower was given in this city recently honoring Mrs. Taylor.

PROSPERITY IS PREDICTED FOR OCTOBER FIRST

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(UP) — "Good times" will return to America in October, bankers of the country voted, 2 to 1, in a poll analyzed in the forthcoming issue of American magazine by Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of the department of commerce.

The remaining one-third of the bankers polled, put the date no later than January 1. All predicted a healthier condition than that which preceded the 1929 debacle.

"The climb will be healthier than that after any previous depression," Klein declares. "The condition of 1929 was hysterical. We are heading toward an earned prosperity rather than an hysterical one. We will arrive at the brass tacks era rather than another brass band age."

Klein points out that 11 depressions in the past 40 years were, on the average, of about 13 months duration. In no case, he adds, have these depressions, especially that of 1929, covered areas on the business map as have those of 1907 and 1921.

Outright stockholders in the six major corporations of the United States have increased by nearly 200,000 since the market crash, Klein says. Business and investors are more closely knit by improved transportation and communication. The country profits by improvement in a similar one, he adds.

"Foreign trade," says the assistant secretary, "will grow with the stabilization of foreign buying power, because Europe still buys half it needs from America. We will have a far more substantial economic body for passing of the cream-puff age in business."

U. S. COLONIAL PERIOD TOPIC OF PROFESSOR

BOSTON, Aug .27.—(INS)—In comparing social and economic conditions of colonial times in Europe with what is being experienced by America today Professor Robert E. Moody, in opening the Tercentenary course on "History and Literature of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, at Boston University's Summer session, declared that contributing causes are so entirely different, that it is difficult to judge.

"With the rural population of England rapidly moving to the cities, due primarily to the inclosure laws, a temporary surplus of labor was involved in the Colonial period," declared the Boston University professor. "Like the big business mergers of today in modern industry and finance, which are creating a surplus of trained men in many fields, the passing of the inclosure laws threw many sheep tenders out of work. Where seven or eight men had been needed before to care for the sheep, one man, with the aid of the new fences, could do the task well.

There was little social legislature then in England to remedy the poor conditions of living," continued Professor Moody. "Consequently many of the people saw in the new world a chance to get away from unfavorable conditions. England did not want law-breakers and like offenders in the country, and unable to cope with them adequately, she sympathized with their efforts to leave. Consequently, many who came over within the Colonial period were vagrants and potential criminals. This was not so with the first settlement that had its roots in the Reformation movement."

A large interest is being shown in the Tercentenary course. A preceding lecture is given each Friday before each excursion to the numerous historic spots throughout the state. Lectures and readings on literature and history of the Massachusetts Bay Colony are given by Profs. Thomas B. Mather, Winslow H. Loveland, Ralph W. Taylor, and Robert E. Moody.

MODERN SOCRATES

LONDON, Aug. 27.—When Serge Vasilanko was sentenced to death in Estonia, a republic on the Gulf of Finland, he was given his choice of dying by hanging or poison. He chose the latter. He took a big dose of poison and suffered for three weeks without dying. He finally recovered and the government wanted him again to take his choice. But he claimed that he had taken his chance of death and that it was not willed that he should die, so he refused both the noose and poison.

Two Headed Trout Lives for Months

MT. SHASTA CITY, Calif., Aug. 27—(INS)—A two-headed Loch Leven trout, now 16 months old, is one of the most interesting freaks at the world's largest fish hatchery here.

The freak feeds by both heads, but it's actions are guided by the right head. For many months both heads grew about the same, but lately the right head is increasing in size. Attendants believe that the fish will die when the weak head no longer is able to serve the body.

Two-headed trout are not uncommon, as are other freaks among the millions of fish spawned here, but Captain H. C. Lambson, superintendent of the hatchery, says that this is the first time in his experience that such a freak has lived more than 45 days.

The tomato has taken its place beside the orange as a source of necessary vitamins in diet.

Raw Fish Cocktail Something New

A raw fish cocktail is the latest serving wrinkle if you want to know what's new. But the term "raw fish" is a mosnomer, for the action of the fruit acid when combined with the fish, cooks it. But here is how it is done—

Use some kind of white meated fish—halibut, sole, or some fish similar. Free from skin, membrane and bones. Cut into tiny dice and squeeze over the raw fish a sufficient quantity of fresh lime juice to have part of the fish in the juice.

Put on ice for two hours, and turn the fish a few times so that it has a chance to season evenly. Dress the fish flakes with cocktail sauce well seasoned, and serve it icy-cold.

The action of the acid lime juice on the albuminous part of the fish cooks it exactly as the white of an egg is coddled when left to stand some time in medium hot water. From the standpoint of vitamin supply this cocktail has much to commend it.

TODAY'S RECIPE

LEMON COFFEE LOAF

1 yeast cake dissolved in
2-3 cup tepid milk
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup pastry flour
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 egg, well beaten
Grated rind of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons shredded candied lemon peel
Flour to make stiff sponge

Take the first five ingredients and whip into a smooth sponge. This can be done the night before or right after breakfast. Twelve to fifteen hours are required to raise the dough and bake the loaf.

After the sponge is very light whip it down and add the melted butter, egg, grated lemon peel and a few chopped pecan meats if wished. Add sufficient flour to make a stiff dough, turn onto the board and knead well. Keep the dough as soft in texture as possible—too much flour used in these breads produce a heavy loaf.

After kneading the dough let it rise again, cut it down, work the shredded peel into it, form into a loaf and let it rise until very light. Bake in a hot oven ten minutes, then reduce the heat and finish baking.

Take part of the raised sponge and to it add a beaten egg, a little more sugar and 4 tablespoons of melted butter. Thicken to soft dough, knead well, then take small pieces, roll them into strips the thickness of a pencil, arrange in a mat on a buttered pan, brush over with milk and sugar and cover until very light. Bake in a quick oven and just before taking from the oven put a spoonful of jam in the center of each butter horn, or brush lightly with sugar frosting after taking from the oven.

A slice of Lemon loaf has a calory value of 150.

NO WOMAN LEAD IN 'THE DAWN PATROL'

For the first time in his long and brilliant career Richard Barthelmess, First National-Vitaphone star, appears minus a leading lady. This occurs in "The Dawn Patrol" which is now playing at the Fox Broadway theater. "The Dawn Patrol" has been heralded as the Beau Geste of the air service and that gives a clew as to why the star of "Son of the Gods" has no leading lady. "The Dawn Patrol" story concerns itself in a highly dramatic manner with the friendships of men and boys who are daily facing death in the R. F. C. Barthelmess is said to have one of the most vital and intense roles of his career as Captain Courtney, commander of the squadron, who hates his job because he must command "schoolboys" to fly antiquated planes against the more modern equipment of the Germans. Among the chief supporting roles are Douglas Fairbanks jr., Neil Hamilton, Gardner James and others. Howard Hawks directed this version of the John Monk Saunders story.

SHELLEY HOUSE TO SHOW 'PICCADILLY'

Quite an optical treat is offered Santa Ana theatergoers, tonight, at Shelley's Third and Rush street theater.

The feature picture, tonight, tomorrow night and Friday night, is none other than, "Piccadilly" and the star of the picture is none other than the world renowned dancer and actress, Gilda Gray, supported by an all-star cast.

"Piccadilly," which was actually filmed in London and vicinity, tells a very dramatic and, to say the least, gripping story of life, love and strife as it exists in London's slums and Limehouse district.

Also on the bill is a comedy, a serial, a news reel and a cartoon, and tonight at 8:30 a diamond ring is to be given away.

GIRL BREAKS RECORD

WINNIPEG, Aug. 27.—An English girl, Katherine Trevelyan, broke the record for climbing Mount Cavel, near Jasper, Alberta, this year. She is the first this season to reach the summit, a distance of more than 11,000 feet. Once on the way up she fell over a cliff and was only saved by the actions of her guide, who grabbed her anchor rope.

'ANYBODY'S WOMAN' CLOSES HERE TODAY

"Anybody's Woman," Paramount production starring Ruth Chatterton in probably her greatest role since "Madam X," which has been showing at the Fox West Coast theater since Monday, closes its run there tonight. The picture has proved particularly popular since its Santa Ana run opened.

It is the story of a chorus girl who marries a well to do lawyer, while he is drunk. He wakes up the next morning to deeply regret his experience, but who allows her to stay.

How she wins his love and even makes him fight to hold her in the end is the backbone of the story, but her acting opposite Clive Brook is the outstanding thing about the picture. Her admirers here will like her in this picture even better than they did in "Sarah and Son."

Clive Brook's part is just as outstanding. He shares honors with her throughout the film, Paul Lukas also has an important role in the picture.

A Fox Movietone newsreel, together with an all-talking comedy and other short subjects also are on the program.

WIDOW OF SOLDIER BOBS HAIR AT 103

LUND, Sweden, Aug. 27.—(UP)—A hundred and three year old flapper with bobbed hair is "Mother" Karna Alm, the widow of a Swedish soldier, who is enjoying her life fully at the Veberod home for the aged, near Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's ancestral home.

In spite of her years she keeps abreast with the styles of the times and recently had her silvery tresses shorn and smartly bobbed.

She can read without glasses, her hearing is unimpaired and she enjoys her daily walk.

Her memory also serves her well and she likes to sing the old love songs of the days when her late husband courted her.

"Mother" Karna refuses to consider 103 as an advanced age and expects to live for many more years.

HAINES STARRING AT WALKER TODAY

William Haines, as a hard boiled gob, washing out clothes on the deck of a dreadnaught, making faces behind the backs of "noncoms," or coming out of a free-for-all unscathed, between the legs of bruised and beaten colleagues, will not surprise his admirers who have long been accustomed to seeing him do just that sort of thing.

However, in "Navy Blues," his first all-talking vehicle, which is now showing at Walker's State theater, he will probably surprise a good many people, for in this picture he not only gives his usual light hearted, fun loving impersonations, in this instance of one of Uncle Sam's sailors, but he also goes "dramatic," something which he has wanted to do for some time.

Whether because of a fear of going stale in playing the continual clown or merely because of a legitimate desire to show the world that he can do something other than make people laugh, William Haines is given an opportunity in "Navy Blues" to do some acting which will be found to be on a par with any done by screen stars who have built up a reputation on their ability to put over an emotional scene.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

The basket man was very kind. He told the bunch he didn't mind if they looked o'er his baskets. "My, they're dandies," Clowny cried. "I'll bet you sell a lot each day as you are traveling on your way. And that must make the donkey glad, to get them off his hide."

"Well, boys, I make them all myself and pile them high upon a shelf, and then I load the donkey down and on our way we go. Folks buy the baskets that I bring and they are used for everything. It seems I loaf along because the donkey walks so slow."

And then the man went on his way and left the Tinymites to play. They found a restaurant nearby and had a bite to eat. When it was dessert time they got some tasty cake and ate a lot. The Travel Man said, "Say, don't stuff. That cake is pretty sweet."

Out on the highway once again the Tinymites all listened when they heard a real loud tooting. "That's a bugle call," cried one. "That sort of music makes a hit with me. Let's find who's blowing it. Perhaps he'll let us blow it, too, and we'll have heaps of fun."

They very shortly met a band of young boys who looked very grand, dressed up in clever uniforms. Said Carpy, "Who are you?" "We're Boy Scouts," one lad told the crowd. "Of course that makes us all feel proud. You've surely heard of Boy Scouts. Maybe you are Boy Scouts, too."

And then they heard wee Coppy shout, "I'm too small yet to be a Scout, but Scouty is a Scout and that's why Scouty is his name." Their new found friend cried, "Well, that's fine." And then they all stood in a line and shook hands with the Tinies, saying, "We are glad you came."

Missing Letter Links

RULES:

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to PIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE-TIE-PIE-PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters cannot be changed.

SORE to HEAD—Don't be a SOREHEAD if you lose out on this par four hole. With some good shots you may get a birdie.

Pitched the First No-Hit Game

Cy Young . . . stocky little pitcher for the Boston Americans . . . pitched a perfect game May 5, 1904.

Here's a story that every genuine baseball bug will want to clip and paste in his scrap book . . . How George Washington Bradley, now a Philadelphia policeman, established pitching records that have stood since 1876

By JAMES W. BOOTH

TO the younger generation of baseball fans the name of George Washington Bradley may not be familiar. When you think of the great stars of the past your mind naturally reverts to A. G. Spaulding, Pop Anson, Wee Willie Keeler, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson, Big Ed Walsh, Chief Bender and similar bright lights of the diamond who helped to make baseball the great game that it is.

The odds are you will not include Bradley. Yet he is one of the unsung heroes of the national pastime, for back in the days when baseball was in its infancy—the first year of the National League—he hung up a set of records which have yet to be shattered.

On July 15, 1876, a little over 54 years ago, Bradley, pitching for St. Louis, held Hartford to no hits and no runs. It was the first no-hit game in the National League.

"That's right," Bradley told me recently. "I pitched the first no-hit game in the National League."

There was no egotism in his voice, not even the semblance of pride. It was a simple, matter-of-fact statement.

That first no-hit game was more than just a no-hit game—not a Hartford batter reached first base. While more than a half century has passed since Bradley turned in that perfect game, but five players since then have accomplished the feat.

JOHN M. WARD of the old Providence Grays and J. Lee Richmond of the Worcester Nationals turned the trick back in 1880; Cy Young of the Boston Americans came through with a perfect game on May 5, 1904; Addie Joss of the Cleveland Indians did it on October 2 four years later, and Charlie Robertson of the Chicago White Sox on April 30, 1922.

In those early days of the National League games were not played every day, as is the custom now. Instead, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday were the playing days. Three games constituted a series.

In the series with Hartford in July, 1876, Bradley, to use the slang expression, was "the whole works." He pitched all three games, shutting out Hartford for 27 innings, and thereby accomplishing an "iron man" stunt that has not been equaled in either the National or American leagues.

On July 11 Bradley held Hartford to four hits and no runs. He licked them on July 13, holding them down to five safe blows and no runs. Then, on the 15th, he pitched his perfect game.

That record has been approached, but never equaled.

WALTER JOHNSON of the Washington Senators approached it when he shut out the New York Yankees, September 4, 5 and 7, 1908. Johnson pitched 27 consecutive innings against the same club, but the Yankees got hits in every game.

Cy Young, that famous pitcher of yesteryear, pitched 22 consecutive years in the major leagues. He turned in three no-hit games. Forty-five consecutive innings without a run being scored by opponents was credited to Young. But he was not facing the same team in all the games and had a fair rest between the five contests.

Bradley is now a Philadelphia policeman. He has been a member of the Quaker City force since he gave up playing baseball 'way back in the 1880's. Although too old for active service, he still remains on the force. He is one of the police guards on duty at City Hall, his duties consisting chiefly of keeping ambulance chasers, political hangers-on and similar small fry, the like of which are to be found congregated in the corridors of every city hall, on the move.

To look at Bradley one would never imagine that he is nearing 75. True, his hair is snow-white, but his eyes are clear and sparkling, his complexion ruddy, his carriage is as straight as an Indian's, and he walks with the snap of a soldier.

When I talked with him he would not admit anything remarkable in the fact that he was the first man to pitch a perfect no-hit game.

"I FIRST played professional baseball in 1874," Bradley said. "I went up to Easton, Pa., and joined the team there, playing first base. We weren't in any league, but we played all the big league teams—the Atlantics of Brooklyn, the Mutuals of New York, the Red Stockings of Cincinnati, and the rest of them. And we beat the majority of them, too.

"The present National League had not been organized then. The league they had in those days was known as the National Association of Baseball Players, but it was on its last legs, in its last year, in fact.

"The Boston team was the whole show in those days.

"That summer William H. Hulbert came on from Chicago and got A. G. Spaulding and some of the other star players of the Boston team to sign contracts to play with Chicago the following year. That raised an awful rumpus. The rule of the association was that no player could sign with another team until the end of the current playing season. The National Association threatened to blacklist them.

"As a result, Hulbert, with the backing of the western clubs, succeeded in organizing the National League the following winter. Hulbert was a Chicago business man, who had always been interested in baseball, and when he organized the new league a general house-cleaning of the game started. Before then the gamblers had a grip on the game and it was very crooked.

"It was a tough proposition in the old days to keep the players from reach of the allurements of gamblers. At every important game a swarm of gamblers carried on their operations without the slightest concealment. They would often carry with them satchels filled with one, two, five and 10-dollar bills and make their bets while flourishing a lot of greenbacks in their hands at every stage of the play—betting on base hits, on innings and on the final result.

"In the course of time the players became badly corrupted by the gamblers, and the public was so disgusted that it looked as though the sport, as a professional one, at least, would go to pieces.

"I started pitching up there in Easton and when Hulbert organized the National League I had an offer to pitch for St. Louis and accepted.

"I remember distinctly one of the first games I pitched out there. It was against Boston and I won it. It gave me a good bit of a thrill, for Boston had won 25 straight games and had just come from Chicago after cleaning up the series with Spaulding's team."

Baseball records show that in this game against Boston Bradley allowed but one hit. The score was 5-0.

BRADLEY played with St. Louis for two years. Of the game which brought him his fame—the no-hit game—he had little to say.

"In 1877," he declared, turning the conversation away from the no-hit game, "I went to Chicago. We won the championship that year. Spaulding and I carried most of the pitching burden, and if I do say it myself we did a darn good job of it, too.

"Speaking of Spaulding, there was a fine man. There was never a finer one. And how he loved baseball! It was his religion. But above all things he wanted it on the square. He didn't want crookedness or gambling attached to it, and it was largely through his efforts that the game is what it is today."

Bradley paused a moment or two, and then asked me,

"Can you imagine a baseball player too proud to receive a salary?"

"Well," he asserted, continuing before I had an opportunity to reply, "when Spaulding first began playing the game, he was. I remember him telling me how it embarrassed him to receive $40 a week for pitching. That was before I started in the game. He had been pitching smack-up ball for the Forest City club of Rockford, Ill., in 1866 and fans used to come over from Chicago in droves.

"Spaulding was then a grocer's clerk and every time he stayed away from his job to play ball his salary was docked. Then one day a man came over from Chicago and offered Spaulding a position at $40 a week with all the time off he wanted to play baseball. This was beating around the bush, of course, but it was the recognized way.

"Had he openly taken money as a ball player he would have been regarded as a despised professional. And, at that stage of the game's history, professionalism was a charge like murder.

"Pop Anson captained the Chicago team I played on. "ANSON was just beginning to attract attention, a ball player if there ever was one. Of course, he had won a lot of fame for himself while playing with Rockford, the same team that Spaulding started with, but it wasn't until with Chicago that he reached the heights.

"Besides being a great captain, he was one of the most scientific hitters that ever played baseball. He had brains in his bat.

"Anson's immortality in baseball, however, rests on the work he did with the Chicago team of 1882, five years after I left the club. It was then that he practically instituted inside baseball, or team plays. Infield and outfield, with Anson, became a part of the science of baseball. Through him modern batting came.

"Beginning with Anson and his team, one can follow the development of team play through the St. Louis Browns under Charley Comiskey's inspiration, through Hanlon's Baltimore team of 1890-94, and Frank Chance's Chicago Cubs."

Bradley left the Cubs after two years, and later joined the Providence Grays club of the National League.

"Charlie Radbourne," he recalls, speaking of the man with whom he shared the pitching duties while with the Grays, "was not only a phenomenal pitcher, but one of the greatest all-around players the game ever produced.

"He shone with quite as much brilliance as Spaulding, until consumption cut short his career about 38 years ago. Several years after I was with Providence, Charlie Sweeney, who was sharing the pitching duties with Radbourne at the time, jumped from organized baseball to the outlaws, and only Radbourne was left for the slab work.

"But that didn't bother Radbourne, for he not only jumped right in and did all the pitching, but he made a new world's record by winning 18 straight games and the championship for Providence. This gameness cost Radbourne his life, for his health broke under the strain, which was generally credited with having caused his consumption.

"BILLY SUNDAY was another great player in his day and many people have said that he was the equal of Ty Cobb. Billy was a good player all right, and the greatest base runner I have ever seen, but I believe he lacked the rare judgment that Cobb had, and which made him just about the greatest player the game ever produced.

"Another great player was King Kelly. He was a great catcher and a great right fielder, a wonder hitter and one of the headiest men I've seen on the diamond."

"What about salaries in those early days?" I asked Bradley.

"As a rule they were small," he replied. "They ranged anywhere from $600 to $1,200 for a season, and $1200 was considered big money. The ball teams in those days were supported chiefly by individual citizens.

"Speaking of salaries and what the different clubs spent on baseball, recalls the hubbub there was in 1885 when the Chicago club sold Mike Kelly to Boston for $10,000. The price created a sensation; the public was aghast.

"Kelly was a peculiar type. He always sought out the weak spots in the game not protected by the rules. There is an old story about him to the effect that as captain of the team the rules entitled him to take any player's position at a moment's notice. A man at bat knocked a foul toward third and over the third baseman's head toward the bench where Kelly sat.

"'You're out of the game,' Kelly yelled to his fielder. 'I'm in your place,' and caught the ball.

HOW many fans realize what a big part the change in the pitching rules since the early days of baseball has played in developing the skilled pitchers of this generation? The pitcher today has seven chances with a batter—four balls and three strikes, barring foul balls, of course. A half century ago he had 12 chances—nine balls and three strikes. In the early days the underhand pitch was the thing.

"Originally," Bradley says, "the rule was that a pitcher had to keep the ball below his hip in delivering it and, of course, this naturally compelled him to deliver the underhand throw. Along about 1882, however, with the advent of the American Association, the rules were changed and the pitcher was permitted to raise his arm as high as his shoulder in delivering the ball. That was a direct step forward. Finally, about 1890, the rules were changed again and no restrictions whatever were placed on the height at which the pitcher might deliver the ball.

"So you see it wasn't any physical weakness or lack of skill, but the rules of the game, that prevented the development back in those early days of baseball of such remarkable speed artists as Rube Waddell and Walter Johnson."

Bradley is an ardent baseball fan, and almost every day when the Athletics are at home you will find him out urging his old friend, Connie Mack, on to another pennant.

George Washington Bradley . . . sketched from an old photograph to show how he looked when he won his baseball immortality back in the days of Anson, Sunday, Radbourne and Kelly . . . pitched three consecutive shutouts, the third game being the first no-hit pitching feat recorded.

Bradley . . . doesn't look anything like his 74 years. . . . He is still on active duty with the Philadelphia police . . . as a guard at City Hall.

Charlie Robertson . . . stepped into fame as a rookie . . . by pitching a no-hit game for the Chicago White Sox, April 30, 1922.

FINANCIAL AND MARKET NEWS

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(UP)—A combination of profit taking and bear attacks brought irregularity into the stock market today after the general list had advanced under leadership of U. S. Steel.

Many stocks retained fair sized gains to the close, but others were driven down. Steel Common made a new high on the movement at 172¼ in the early dealings, slumped off to 170⅛. Near the close it was rallying again, helping most of the market to close above lows of the day.

CHICAGO BD. OF TRADE

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Breaking in the latter part of the session, on the Board of Trade today, wheat sank to new lows for the day with March at a new low for the season. The market was heavy throughout the session and with Winnipeg selling off sharply, October there hitting a new low on the crop, selling became general nad stop loss orders were caught. Buying against bids checked the decline. Corn sank with wheat after having een decidedly strong early and aided in sustaining wheat prices during the forepart of the session. Oats trailed corn closely.

At the close wheat was 1⅜ to 1½c lower, corn was ½ to 1½c lower and oats were 1⅛ to 1⅜c lower. Provisions were unevenly steady.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION

Mayor Rolph, of San Francisco, is the candidate on the Republican ticket for governor of the state of California. This nomination is no surprise to most people who were following the situation. The split in the prohibition and law enforcement forces of Southern California was bound to give the vote to Rolph, in the opinion of both the Fitts and Young leaders, and it was simply a question of which was the stronger.

The state Anti-Saloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the institutions to which the forces always look for leadership, came out early in the campaign and declared that the stronger of the two candidates, in their judgment, was C. C. Young, and they requested the support of Mr. Young. Rebellion broke out over this pronouncement, and apparently the request aroused the followers of Fitts to a greater zeal on behalf of their candidate.

The campaign for Fitts in Los Angeles and Orange county took on very largely the character of a holy crusade, and the tremendous landslide in these two counties to Fitts over Young was expected by those who had been closely watching the events of the immediate previous period. And yet out of it emerges Governor Young as the second man on the ticket, with Mr. Rolph first.

Mr. Fitts, outside of Los Angeles and Orange counties did not receive a very large vote, and in many places his vote was negligible. The issue of supporting a Southern governor had great effect in the closing days of the campaign. This appealed to sectional prejudice, we believe, unwise as well as unfair. But in any case, a "wet" candidate, the Mayor of San Francisco, a Northern man is the candidate on the Republican ticket for governor of the state, and he is confronted by Milton K. Young, of Los Angeles, the Democrat. Ordinarily, a nomination on the Republican ticket means an election. The vote for Governor Young, combined with the vote of Mr. Fitts, according to present returns, shows the two in a majority over Rolph by 150,000. This nomination is a great blow to the Hoover administration and to the most important issue in the county.

Orange county had some upsets. The election of W. T. Lambert to the auditorship over the present incumbent, William C. Jerome, came as a great surprise to many people, and yet the sentiment of the county as currently reported, was quite completely expressed in that vote. There was a disposition to put a new group in control of the political life of Orange county, and Mr. Lambert who has an amiable, winning, capable personality, conducted such a campaign as to win the confidence and votes of the people of the country.

Mr. Joplin, the present treasurer, fell by the wayside, in part owing to the same sentiment. The run-off for this office will be between Earl Abbey and E. B. Trago.

James Sleeper, the assessor, is the only man in the courthouse upon whom a serious fight was made who came through as an elected man. The character and ability of the man, and the viciousness of his opposition rather insured this. The men who were back of the campaign against the present assessor can certainly take no satisfaction out of the result. The people rebuked them to the measure of their power practically everywhere and except in the very center of this opposition itself in Anaheim, the vote for assessor evidenced the confidence of the people.

The vote on the office of district attorney was no surprise to us. We knew that the political organization of the county was out in force, solidly behind Sam Collins. At the same time the opposition, and those who were desirous of seeing a candidate who openly espoused independent action and the "dry" cause, were handicapped by the inability to come out pronouncedly for one candidate without being unfair to another who might have equal claim. In the coming contest the elements back of the "dry" and law enforcement groups will not be so handicapped.

Two of the candidates, Mr. Haynes and Mr. Westover, had received the endorsement of the Law Enforcement league, and we had not thought it fair to come out for one as against the other. At the same time, David Wettlin had also answered the letter, and was making his campaign to a very considerable extent on the same issues as were Westover and Haynes. The vote for Mr. Westover was an expression by the people of confidence in a man who has no entanglements that will prevent him from carrying on the duties of his office for the people's interest.

To some extent, the same condition prevailed in the sheriff's race as did in the district attorney's race. Two candidates, Mr. Jackson and Mr. Pearson, from the standpoint of law enforcement, were equally satisfactory, and The Register had not felt it wise or just to take a position between them. The large vote for Logan Jackson suggests to all the possibility, if not the probability of his election.

The election of Ray Adkinson as superintendent of schools is a personal compliment to his ability and personality. His former students were with him to a man, and they unquestionably had great influence with their parents. We have no doubt but what many parents were asked for the first time in their lives to vote for a candidate by their sons and daughters in the request made to vote for Mr. Adkinson.

There was really no issue in the campaign between the two candidates for tax collector. We expressed ourselves favorable to Mrs. Spangler because we felt it was only fair to the women, and fair to one who had given of her time and energy and means to every good cause, and done it as unstintingly as she has done. With nearly all the other offices held by men, it would have been fine if a woman could have been elected to this one. But a real campaign was not conducted on her behalf, except by herself and her Parent-Teachers' Association friends. During the last week of the campaign one or two of the papers came out on her behalf. If a real campaign had been conducted, it would have undoubtedly changed the result.

The surveyor and coroner were re-elected, and few looked for any other result.

There was little campaigning done in the supervisorial fights except in the fifth district. There Stuart Lucas conducted a real open fight, together with several other candidates opposed to the present incumbent, and Mr. Lucas heads the ticket for the run-off, with the present incumbent, Mr. Jeffrey, in second place. In the sense that there was a campaign in the fifth district, there was really no campaign in the second and fourth districts. An opportunity was given to vote, and a substantial vote was given the opposition candidates, but the two present incumbents had no difficulty in their re-election.

For constable of Santa Ana township, the four high men were Jesse Elliott, Cornish Roehm, Vernon Barnhill and Joseph Ryan. Jesse Elliott, who received the most votes among the six candidates, did not receive quite enough to be elected in the primaries.

We wish to congratulate the men who were elected in the primaries yesterday to their official positions. A great responsibility is theirs. Orange county is growing in population and wealth. It will grow in the next four years. We desire to say that regardless of differences in opinions, we will co-operate as far as is possible in all plans for bigger development.

At the close of this primary campaign we look back upon the weeks with satisfaction. We know of nothing we have said or done in respect to it that we have not done in the best spirit possible, and we certainly have said nothing which we feel we would not repeat again if we passed through the same circumstances. As a rule, we believe the character of campaign conducted by all the candidates has been very creditable. While we feel it is unfortunate that men for the board of supervisors are elected by districts rather than by the county as a whole, yet as long as that condition exists, we must acquiesce as men in a democracy to what the smaller group in any district determines upon.

Disappointments are bound to come to candidates and to people who support them, but it is fine at the conclusion of a contest, to have the satisfaction of feeling that what was done was honorably done and that there are no regrets either in victory or defeat. The Register naturally feels grateful that it has found such a vast number of citizens who agree with the principles for which it has been standing.

AN ARTIST PASSES

The passing of Lon Chaney, apparently at the height of his career, is a great loss. The story of his life as it is revealed more completely in the notices of his death than was sought by him in life, proves that Lon Chaney deserved the admiration of the public for his personal conduct and progress toward fame, as well as for his art. He was born in Colorado Springs in 1883, the son of parents who were both deaf mutes. As a property boy in the opera house of Colorado Springs he taught himself by observation.

Success came to the artist in "The Miracle Man," "The Penalty," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Phantom of the Opera," "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Road to Mandalay," "Tell It To The Marines," "Mr. Wu," "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," and "The Unholy Three." Lon Chaney long held himself aloof from the "talkies" and the recent production of "The Unholy Three" as a "talkie" which met with popular approval, seemed to be the dawn of finer and more complete productions in which he would star.

He has left the world of mortals but there remain indelible impressions of his pantomimes. Thrills of revulsion and horror, which his portrayals of deformed and anti-social individuals inspired, are commingled with the lesson he impressed through many of these characters: that there is much good in the worst of us—and often where it is most concealed.

Where Are the Wallflowers?

New York Times

It is too much to expect that any intelligent person over 30 should have the point of view of a college boy or a debutante. Nor can the young business man or woman see the world just as it appears to children in high school. But the individual who left school behind several years ago should still be capable of observing how the youngsters look at life and each other.

A curious mixture of the outlook of two generations is found in an article in the September Harper's by Brenda Ueland. She recalls the horrors experienced by young girls who were not popular at dancing classes or parties, and says with truth that many women now are handicapped socially because they were once wall-flowers. Because girls were taught to try to charm somebody, to conceal their preferences and to be both modest and coy, she believes that every grown woman today has known the pangs of the wallflower complex.

It is not easy to disprove that statement, though every one can think of women who never gave evidence of that early experience; but when the writer says that the girls of today are suffering from the same disfiguring social education, it is hard for any one who sees many youngsters to believe it. The little girls, almost always a trifle more mature and composed for their years than the boys, do not seem to need encouragement. There is no pretense about them, and at the rate they are going it will not be long before the boys will need protection from a wallflower complex.

STILL THE RECORD HOLDER

One Simeon Stylites
Who lived some years B. C.—
There being then, on moor or fen
No semblance of a tree,—
And having made his mind up
That he'd be widely known
And win wild cheers, sat thirty years
Upon a pole of stone.

For thirty years the people
Who dwelt near Antioch
In much surprise would lift their eyes
To that slim spire of rock,
And when their startled vision
Those placid features met,
They said "Well well! Don't that beat all?
Old Sim is up there yet!"

Eftsoons throughout the region
A host of ardent souls
Who hoped to claim a meed of fame
Were perched on marble poles.
But lacking in endurance
They soon would fail and fall;
As all men know the records show
That Sim out sat them all.

Moral:

Folks may become immortal
By sitting in a tree,
As that stout kid Stylites did
So many years B. C.,
But they will not be by-words
In anybody's ears
Unless they sit and do not suit
For MORE than thirty years.

Today Should Be a World Holiday

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

There are those who would have us abolish all national holidays because in their view nationalism is too narrow. They maintain that national holidays deepen devotion to country at the expense of the larger devotion to humanity.

There are others who seek to abolish religious holidays. They would have us cherish the aspirations which draw men of all faiths together, rather than the differences which keep men apart.

Most of us believe, however, that devotion to country and to church do not necessarily prevent larger enthusiasms. We would not aboilsh what holidays we have, but liberalize them.

We would go a large step further. We would establish a World Holiday. Unhappily, not one of the hundreds of holidays which are now celebrated the world over can ever become a World Holiday. Most of them are as little suited to the purpose as the Fourth of July. Even Christmas would not do for three-fourths of the world's population. In the past, no day has given the peoples of all nations common cause for rejoicing.

Now there is such a day—August 27—the day which marks the ratification of the World Peace Pact. No other day in history is pregnant with such good for all mankind.

Many of our holidays had their origin in conflicts which were born of misunderstanding, greed, hatred, and revenge. Many of our holidays are celebrated, in part, so as to perpetuate misunderstanding, greed, hatred, and revenge.

Let us make August 27 a holiday on which travelers the world over, under every flag, will get together to strengthen their unity of purpose and rejoice in common aspirations.

Last year more than 300,000 travelers from the United States went to Europe. More were there in August than in any other month. Think what it would mean for them to unite, once a year, with the citizens of all nations in celebration of the renunciation of war! It would be one more permanent force for world peace.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

MORE THINGS THAT ARE GONE

Yesterday, as part of America's look ahead into the next decade of her economic life, I listed three factors underlying the prosperity of the last decade, on which we probably cannot count as heavily in the next decade.

These three factors were: (1) The phenomenal automobile production which raced ahead while the American people were becoming automobile owners for the first time, a production that will, in the future tend to scale down to a meeting of the demand for replacement and the new demand that growth of population will create; (2) The suburban building boom created by the postponed building enforced by the war and an almost epidemic exodus of home owners from the cities to the suburbs, a development now facing the fact that delayed building is being caught up and the exodus to the suburbs is settling down to normal; (3) The radio industry which faces the same problem of settling down to replacement and satisfying the new demand created by growth of population that the automobile industry faces.

Today I list some added factors of the last decade that will have diminished force in the next decade. They are:

(4) Foreign trade. Our export trade was on the wane for several months before the market crash came. Europe found it impossible to export enough goods to the United States to make it economically sound practice for her t oimport American goods too heavily. Europe was getting on her to import American goods too of crops and commodities and did not need so many American goods and foodstuffs. And the roaring American market of early 1929 kept at home money that might otherwise have financed further European industrial development, to say nothing of the fact that the American market sucked money out of Europe. The outlook is that, in the absence of some drastic reversals of policy on our part or on Europe's part, our export trade for the next decade will be slowed down.

(5) The religion of style. During the last decade the religion of style—annual models and the like—was in the flush period of making converts; during the next decade it will be less a matter of making converts of the millions, and more a matter of keeping these converts as paying communicants. And there are some signs of revolt against kaleidoscopic changes of models and styles.

(6) Installment buying. Here again we are probably facing a problem of normal development following an abnormal period of pioneer promotion.

There are, of course, other factors that will operate with changed force in the next decade, but these will suffice to illustrate the kind of analysis that America must, it seems to me, make if she is to plan her future intelligently.

Tomorrow I shall speak of some things that remain.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

THE SECRET SIGNAL

Peggy was a very little girl—just five. Her family was one of those rich in relatives and poor in children. So everybody took an interest in Peggy. Sometimes this interest was hard to bear and Peggy was known to break into tears. Sometimes they were tears of rage, and then she stamped her foot and screamed. Sometimes they were tears of fatigue and then she lay down on the floor and wept copiously, and with waiting variations.

Father was her great friend, next to mother. Mother tried to keep the visitors attention centered on other things but they always turned to Peggy. Then father had a bright idea. He and Peggy made up a secret. They would have some secret signs and talk to each other right when there were other folks in the room and they would never know.

If father coughed behind his hand and lifted his right eyebrow he meant, "How's tricks?" and if tricks were all right Peggy was to brush her hair back with her right hand and wink with the left eye.

If father should say suddenly, "Well, there's that dog," Peggy was to run right out of the room and take a drink of water or have a little leg stretching race about the yard. That was to happen if tricks were not so good and there was danger of tears.

You have no idea what joy that secret charm held for a bothered little girl. If she was too tired to sit still any longer and she either had to sit or get out of the place, she was to scratch the end of her nose with her right forefinger. Father was to rub his left ear when Peggy was to slip away.

You see it was the comfort of knowing that if things were too much there was a friend at hand and a way out. There was, too, the happy relationship between a child and her parents, a bond that was precious beyond words, one that would hold in times of stress. One that would hold in years to come.

Some grown people fear to have such understandings with a child, some old idea of the place of a child and the dignity of the elders. Well, truth is stronger than dignity every time.

When grandmother is having a tantrum, and there are those who do—when uncle is being crabby and auntie edgy, it is far better to rub the end of the nose thoughtfully, sneeze one into the handkerchief and look expressively at Peggy which signals "Isn't it awful?" than to pretend that things are all right—that whatever a grown-up does is right. Peggy will stand the row better and will have a truer understanding of life and of people, and the family tie will not be strained.

I think a code of secret signals are just the thing. Try a set of your own and see. They work in many a difficult situation.

HEGEL'S BIRTH

On August 27, 1770, Georg Hegel, one of the greatest German philosophers, was born at Stuttgart, Germany.

His association at the University of Tubingen with Schelling, the philosopher, had a great intellectual influence on him. When he finished college Helgel became a tutor in Switzerland and then an instructor of philosophy at the University of Jena.

In 1811, after he had published his Encyclopedia of Philosophical Sciences, he accepted the chair of philosophy at the University of Berlin where his lectures attracted hearers from all ranks and professions. Because he ardently defended existing political institutions, he rose to great political influence. The noted aphorism in which he summed up his teaching, "The rational is the actual, and the actual is the rational," was taken to imply that the Prussian organizatiin was the perfection of reason and freedom.

Helgel's system which is usually termed the "philosophy of the absolute," falls into three departments: logic, or the science of thought in its pure unity with itself; the philosophy of nature, in which the ideal principle is shown to underlie even the material world; and the philosophy of spirit.

Rolph Leads Young Over State With Fitts In Third

MERRIAM IS VICTOR OVER CARNAHAN

Ray L. Riley for Controller and Webb for Attorney General Seen

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Virtually complete returns from the 10,283 precincts in the 58 California counties today indicated that James Rolph jr., mayor of San Francisco, will be the next governor of California.

Governor C. C. Young was a fairly close second to Rolph, although it was extremely doubtful whether the Young vote in the interior could offset the support Rolph received as first choice in San Francisco and second choice in Los Angeles.

Buron Fitts, Los Angeles district attorney, was in third place.

The vote, with 8072 precincts heard from was:

Rolph 299,279.

Young 261,323.

Fitts 229,964.

Second Race

The campaign just closed was the second gubernatorial contest in which Rolph has participated. In 1918 Rolph opposed William D. Stephens, who succeeded Hiram W. Johnson as governor. He ran as a Democrat and Republican, winning the Democratic nomination but losing the Republican contest and later the supreme court ruled that he could not participate in the general election because he was registered as a Republican.

It was apparent at midday that Frank Merriam, Long Beach, had won the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, Tallant Tubbs, San Francisco, was the closest opponent to the Long Beach man.

Returns from 6688 precincts gave Merriam 132,650 votes and Tubbs 105,147.

Most of the outstanding precincts are comparatively unimportant so far as the gubernatorial race is concerned. Seven hundred Los Angeles county precincts have yet to report but so far Rolph has been second in Los Angeles county, with Fitts first, so that the report on these outstanding districts probably will not materially affect present standings.

A number of northern California precincts are to be heard from also but in these it is anticipated that Rolph and Young will at least break even and in the event that happens the nomination—tantamount t oelection in California—goes to Rolph.

Congress Races

Contests for congressional representation at Washington were comparatively dull, with incumbents being in the lead in all instances.

In the first congressional district Clarence F. Lea, Santa Rosa, apparently had won both the Republican and Democratic nominations. He was opposed for the Republican

Former President of United States

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 27. — A study of the economic development of this country, of its capacity to produce and consume, of its manufacturers and its markets, reveals that general business never has found any saturation point.

We have been considering the present as a time of depression. Yet it is now reported that within the past few months one hundred and twenty-five million dollars worth of miniature golf outfits have been put into operation. During the worse period of nineteen twenty-one it was the newly perfected radio that caught the public fancy, with sales soon reaching hundreds of millions of dollars. Before that came the motion picture which now sells over one hundred million admission tickets each week. Meantime the automobile and aircraft industries have been created.

Twenty-five years ago only a few people were engaged in these enterprises. The number now runs into the millions. We can see in these new occupations the natural remedy for labor temporarily displaced by machinery. What course our great financial and scientific resources will take in the next era of development we do not know. But all past experience teaches that it will be an important advance in the economic welfare of the nation.

SCHOONER WITH SEVEN ABOARD REPORTED SUNK

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 27.—(UP) — Three haggard men staggered out of the surf today and told a story of how they had been swimming for eight hours after the wreck of the schooner Francis T., with her crew of seven men.

The men—John Larre, Clarence Atkinson and Freeman Bonbury—said the schooner sailed out of Halifax two weeks ago bound for Bermuda.

The men collapsed on the beach at the foot of Pennsylvania avenue. Patrolman Grant Melvin saw them come stumbling up the sand. He ran over and heard Larre mumble a few words and then all the men pitched forward on their heads, unconscious. A patrol wagon was summoned and the three men were taken to detective headquarters.

Hot food and medical attention revived Larre, Atkinson and Bonbury, and they told a story that started a flurry of activity at coast guard headquarters. Ten minutes later a cutter was under steam and heading for the open sea to search for the water-logged Francis T., and the four other members of the crew who may be standing by, manning the pumps in the attempt to keep the vessel afloat.

It was on August 19, according to Larre, that a storm of hurricane proportions swept the decks of the tiny schooner. Seams began to spread and water seeped into the hold. Reluctant to abandon their cargo, the crew stood by the pumps until last night. In the darkness, 16 miles off shore and in a southerly direction from Atlantic City, the seven men gathered on the deck and decided to send an expedition for aid.

Atkinson ,Bonbury and Larre were chosen to take the frail dory and make their way to shore. They said they took the dory through a high running sea for about 11 miles and then a wave caught the small craft and pitched the three men into the sea. Somehow they got together in the darkness, picked their direction and started the long swim for land.

Larre declared they had been swimming for eight hours before their feet touched bottom and they crawled up on the beach to faint from exhaustion.

HEAT WAVE IS SWEEPING OVER BRITISH ISLES

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(UP)—A heat wave that hourly became more severe spread over the British Isles, parts of Europe and the African coast today with the breaking of the recent period of cold summer weather.

London experienced the hottest night ever recorded for the last week in August after a maximum temperature of 88 degrees yesterday. Today the sun burned the city again, driving the mercury up to 84 in the shade this morning and promising to increase the temperature steadily throughout the afternoon.

Holiday makers, convinced that the recent cold weather would continue, were caught at the resorts with only heavy clothing and many were forced to curtail their vacations. Swimming pools were crowded as early as 6 a. m., particularly Lansburys Lido in Hyde park where many stenographers could be seen leaving for offices clad in light frocks over their bathing costumes.

Army maneuvers in Surrey were suspended in mid-battle due to the intense heat.

The British tradition of never discarding vest, or even coat, was overcome when the temperature increased to 88 degrees in the shade at 1 p. m.

Stockbrokers in shirt sleeves, but still wearing their top hats, astonished the business section of the city, just as the classical concert at Queens Hall last night was marked by the doffing of coats by patrons who had gathered to hear Tschaikovsky's fifth symphony.

65 Endangered As Gas Fumes Sweep Through Hospital

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 27.—(UP)—Chemical fumes from a fumigator in a ward which had been vacated for disinfection spread through St. Mary's hospital here today, imperilling the lives of 65 bedridden patients.

All the patients were moved from the gassed ward, half of them being placed in the hospital yard and the rest in a new wing of the building into which the gas did not penetrate.

"MA" KENNEDY AND DAUGHTER RECONCILED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—(UP)—(INS)—The reported reconciliation between Mrs. Minnie Kennedy and her daughter, Aimes Semple McPherson, noted evangelist, today had reached a point where they had exchanged notes with each other.

From the Malibu Beach cottage, where the evangelist is reported recovering from a threatened nervous breakdown, came a note to her mother who is at a Brentwood sanitarium. The text of the note was not revealed. Mrs. Kennedy replied to the note yesterday, but she would not reveal the contents.

Mrs. Kennedy was expected to leave the sanitarium at Brentwood today. The bandage has been removed from her injured nose and she expressed the hope that the nose would be straight. She claimed it was injured during a skirmish with her daughter.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Kennedy has

Plotters Planned To Blame Slaying On Capone, Charge

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 27.—(UP)—The plan in an alleged plot to assassinate Gov. Doyle E. Carlton was to blame the slaying on Al Capone, Chicago gang leader, Clem Dowling, roommate of one of three men charged with conspiring to take the governor's life, testified at a preliminary hearing today.

Dowling, first witness for the prosecution, said that Frank Rawls, one of the defendants, told him on July 15 that Carlton "will be bumped off" and there was "no chance to get caught; we've got a way to blame Capone."

Plane Turns Over, Blazes And Crashes

First Reports Said Craft Had Fallen Into Crowd and Many Killed

CURTISS WRIGHT AIRPORT, CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—A navy pursuit plane flipped over and caught fire at the southeast end of the grandstand while hurtling through space at approximately 150 miles an hour during the national air races today.

Lieutenant J. P. Deshazo, 28 year old pilot, was removed from the wreckage of his plane and died a few minutes later in the airport hospital, the first fatality of the meet which began last Saturday.

Deshazo was streaking around the five mile racing course with 16 other navy pursuit planes which were taking part in the most spectacular speed event of the day when his tiny Bowing super equipped plane was caught in a rush of air from rival craft and thrown over. The plane fell about 50 feet.

From the press box it appeared at first that the plane had crashed into a crowd occupying bleacher seats at the southeast end of the field.

NAVY CUTTING DOWN ON SHORE EXPENSES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(UP)—An exhaustive study of naval shore projects was under way today in connection with the navy's economy drive which already has reduced expenditures by nearly $8,000,000.

Assistant Secretary Jahncke said it has become apparent the navy is operating certain stations and shore properties which cannot be regarded as essential. He said bureau chiefs and the budget officer would submit the results of their study to Secretary Adams, who will determine where the economies can best be effected.

Jahncke declared no desision has been reached on the proposed abandonment of the navy yard at Charleston, S. C., and other shore projects.

LORD BEAVERBROOK ILL ABOARD YACHT

DOVER, Eng., Aug. 27.—(UP)—Lord Beaverbrook, the publisher, was ill aboard his yacht today. He was suffering from food poisoning.

His London physician, Dr. Wilson, was summoned to Dover to aid Dr. Laird, who was attending the publisher. Lord Beaverbrook was spending a holiday on his yacht.

Lord Beaverbrook, publisher of the London Daily Express and the London Evening Standard, has been one of the outstanding exponents of empire free trade, which he sought to persuade the conservative party to adopt as a platform.

LOGAN JACKSON LEADS JERNIGAN; WESTOVER TO CONTEST WITH COLLINS

FITTS IS FIRST IN COUNTY

ORANGE COUNTY VOTERS yesterday expressed their preference for state, county and township officials in one of the hottest and most interesting primary elections that the county has seen for some time. Returns were slow in coming into the county clerk's office and it was not until after 11 o'clock today that the last precinct total was reported to County Clerk J. M. Backs. More than 26,000 voters participated in the election, making a percentage of eligible votes cast of approximately 54.

Orange county voters gave Buron Fitts, the crusading district attorney of Los Angeles county, a handsome majority, relegating Gov. C. C. Young to second place and trailing James Rolph, San Francisco mayor, in the cellar position. Official returns from 149 precincts of the 189 in the county gave these candidates the following vote: Fitts, 9418; Young, 4355; Rolph, 3509.

Many Upsets

Several upsets were on the street as the votes were tallied, chief among them being the defeat of County Auditor W. C. Jerome, whose opponent, W. T. Lambert, newspaper man of Laguna Beach, rolled in 12,556 votes to the 12,143 that were cast for Jerome. Another new face that will be seen in the court house as a result of the nomination, which is equivalent to election when there are only two candidates, will be that of Ray Adkinson, vice principal of the Santa Ana high school, who defeated R. P. Mitchell in the race for the office of county school superintendent. J. C. Joplin, treasurer for many terms, ran third in the race for renomination, being headed by Earl Abbey, deputy county clerk and E. B. Trago, merchant, and was eliminated from the race. Trago and Abbey will make the race for the office next fall. In the primary, the vote was as follows for this office: Trago, 10,432; Abbey, 7358; Joplin, 7068.

Popular interest centered in the race for places on the ticket in connection with the offices of district attorney and sheriff, with a number of candidates in the field for each of these important county offices, and cheering for favorites was indulged in at the office of County Clerk J. M. Backs as the official returns were brought in bringing additional votes to swell the count of first one and then another.

Westover On Ticket

The fact that Sam Collins, assistant district attorney, would be assured first place on the ticket was quite evident as the returns slowly rolled in during the night. Harry Westover, who has made an active campaign on a law enforcement program, ran second with D. G. Wettlin, Orange attorney and R. E. Haynes, of Fullerton following. Collins received an outstanding plurality with 11,-

ELLIOTT LEADS FIELD IN RACE FOR CONSTABLE

COMPLETE RETURNS from all Santa Ana township precincts show that Jess Elliott, incumbent, leads the race for constable by a safe margin, while Cornish Roehm, Santa Ana police officer was second and State Traffic Officer Vernon Barnhill was third.

Joseph Ryan, incumbent, ran fourth, Bert Dawson was fifth and Frank Lutz was sixth in the race.

The result of the constable's race indicate that Elliott may not have to make a second race in November for one of the constable offices, while the second will be decided between Roehm and Barnhill. There was less than 100 votes between the two.

Roehm's vote was somewhat of a surprise. He ran a good race throughout the city, piling up a big majority in a number of city precincts. The vote was as follows:

Elliott 4644.
Roehm 2484.
Barnhill 2392.
Ryan 1463.
Dawson 1356.
Lutz 1351.

PERU RECOGNITION DELAYED BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Secretary of State Stimson said today he did not believe the situation in Peru, where President Legula has been overthrown and a revolutionary government set up, had yet reached the stage where the state department felt called on to consider a recognition policy toward the new regime.

Officials consider conditions in Peru still are chaotic and hence are avoiding commitments on future foreign policy of the United States toward whatever government may emerge from the present revolution.

Arctic Explorers' Relatives Enroute To Meet Steamer

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Relatives of the late Salomon Auguste Andree, Swedish balloonist-explorer, whose ice encased body was found in the Arctic last week, were enroute today to Tromsoe to meet the steamer Bratvaag, which is returning the remains to civilization, the Svenska Dagebladet's Tromsoe correspondent reported.

The Bratvaag also is returning the bodies of Nils Strindberg and Knut Fraenkel, Andree's companions on an attempted balloon flight over the North Pole, which ended in disaster within the Arctic circle. The three bodies, excellently preserved in the ice, were found by Dr. Gunnar Horn.

659 votes checked under his name. Westover polled 7322 and these two men will fight it out for the office at the November election. Wettlin ran third with 4616 votes and Haynes had a total of 2246.

In the sheriff's "free for all," Logan Jackson, of Orange, one of the law enforcement candidates who shared the support of the Law Enforcement League and the People's League with James Pearson, showed surprising strength and ran in the lead with a total of 6977. Sam Jernigan, incumbent, pulled 6565 votes for second position and these two candidates will again go to the polls in November for selection of the man who will hold this office for the next four years. James Pearson, chief of police at Fullerton, ran third in the race, with the support of 5024 voters in the county. Leo Porter, of Fullerton, was next in line with 4772 votes. Ralph McFadden, rancher, polled 2883 votes for fifth place; "Bill" Sylvester, of Santa Ana, carried 1587 and W. J. McCardia, rancher who made a campaign with the assistance of his six children as an orchestra, wound up the list in the sheriff's race with 343 votes.

Sleeper Wins

One of the hottest races of the campaign was between James Sleeper, county assessor, and George Montgomery, of Anaheim, who made a determined effort to dislodge Sleeper from the position he has held for 20 years. His efforts were unsuccessful however, for Sleeper rolled up one of the biggest votes in the contest to defeat him. The result was Sleeper 16,087; Montgomery, 10,224.

In the competitive races the ticket was led in the county by Coroner Charles D. Brown, who garnered 18,242 votes to defeat Dr. J. G. Berneicke, whose vote for the office of coroner and public administrator totaled 5167. The next to the highest competitive vote was recorded in favor of Tax Collector John C. Lamb, who was supported by 17,504 voters in his race against Mrs. Belle Spangler. Mrs. Spangler received 8760 votes.

The highest vote was received by Miss Justine Whitney, county recorder, who was not opposed. County Clerk J. M. Backs was also returned to office without competition, receiving 20,256 votes.

Hillyard Elected

W. K. Hillyard, incumbent, was victor in the race for the position as county surveyor, receiving 15,100 ballots as compared to 7580 that were voted for his opponent, W. G. Knox, former city manager of Santa Ana, who received 7580.

The returns for the county offices given above are complete official returns with the exception of one precinct in Laguna Beach.

One of the features of the election was the strength shown by Stuart Lucas, of Corona Del Mar, candidate for supervisor from the fifth district. Lucas showed his heels to the field of five competitors and nosed out George Jeffrey, incumbent, for the first position. Lucas had made a strenuous campaign in his district, and the complete official returns as reported by County Clerk J. M. Backs in this race gave him a total of 1000 votes. Jeffrey crowded close behind with 977 ballots, and these two will contest the office at the fall election. Lew Wallace ran third with 912; and the other contestants were C. O. Artz, 845; Eugene Fenelon, 347, and J. W. Sauers, 301.

In the fourth district, Willard Smith, chairman of the board of supervisors, ran true to form and rolled up better than a two to one vote against his opponent, J. F. Snowden. John Mitchell, present member of the board from the second district, also showed his strength in defeating J. A. Armitage, of Sunset Beach, 2045 to 1253.

LEADING

Jesse Elliott, below, was high man in the race for constable of Santa Ana township. Elliott is the incumbent.

DEPUTY AHEAD

Sam Collins led the field in the primary election for nomination as district attorney of Orange county. He is at present a deputy in the office of District Attorney Z. B. West.

been trying to get in touch with Angelus Temple officials, to ask them, she said, concerning the status of a $250,000 note which is payable to her daughter.

"I understand that the Echo Park Evangelistic association deeded Angelus Temple to the Church of the Four Square Gospel, and that part of the payment was a note for $250,000," said Mrs. Kennedy.

"I want to know if that deed has been recorded. I want to know if my daughter's interests are being guarded."

ORDERS WAITING FOR ORANGE COUNTY FISH

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 27.—Orders for Orange county packed fish are waiting, ready to be filled as soon as the Newport Packing company gets started, according to W. I. Turck, president of the new corporation, following a meeting of fishermen and others interested in the project.

The meeting was held at the fish packing establishment, at Bay Front and Twenty-eighth street, and began with a mackerel dinner, attended by more than 200, including Mayor M. J. Johnson, Lew Wallace, Stuart H. Lucas and other prominent Newport Beach business men.

Turck said that he plans to have the plant in operation shortly after Sept. 1, in order to take advantage of the skipjack (striped tuna) season, which runs from about Sept. 10 to Oct. 31. Tuna, sardine and mackerel will be packed. The sardine season begins Nov. 1 and runs until April 1.

Mackerel will be packed all year, according to the plans. Already this brand of mackerel has attained distinction, and orders were filled for as far away as Egypt and the Philippines, as well as many parts of the United States. Turck said that this cannery is the only one in the country where all the mackerel canned are individually caught by hook and line. This insure a superior quality of fish, he said.

ORANGE COUNTY STARBOAT MEN OFF FOR EAST

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 27.—The best wishes of Newport bay and Orange county yachtmen and boating fans will go with Walton Hubbard jr., skipper of the Tempe IV, who will compete in the annual races of the International Star Class Yacht Racing association, representing the Newport Harbor Yacht club, at Chesapeake bay, Maryland, September 29 to October 3.

Hubbard will have as his crew, Tom Ditmar, local boat builder, who will also look after the Tempe IV during the races. Ditmar has already left for the east on other business, and the Tempe IV has been shipped to Chesapeake bay. Hubbard is a son of Dr. Walton Hubbard, of Los Angeles, who has a summer home here and is an enthusiastic Newport harbor booster.

The annual starboat classic is held each year at the home port of the winning boat. Hubbard with Dick Edwards as crew, won the championship at Naragannset Bay, R. I., in 1927, which brought the 1928 event here. In 1928 the Edington of New Orleans, won and the Eel of Chesapeake bay was first in New Orleans last fall.

J. M. Webster, captain of the star fleet of the Newport Harbor Yacht club, said that the title has never yet been won twice by the same club or the same skipper. Therefore, if Hubbard can bring it back to Newport harbor, he will not only assure a big international event for this port next year, but break a record.

Starboats from Canada, Hawaii, the Philippines, Cuba, France, England and perhaps other countries will compete at Chesapeake bay, as well as from nearly a dozen states of this country.

6 Cars of Cattle Shipped to Midway City from Montana

MIDWAY CITY, Aug. 27.—Six carloads of thoroughbred Hereford cattle were brought into Midway City today by Walter J. Hill, owner of Midway City. There were 35 milk cows in the lot, the others being one and two year old bulls. They were shipped from Hill's Montana ranch and were trucked from Los Angeles and are in pasture on the former Johnson property, which Hill recently acquired.

L. A. PRODUCE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Buying was rather limited on today's market with slow movement in practically all lines. Several lines were in over supply with prices considerably weaker. Local loose avocados jobbed at 20-25c per lb. on seedlings with Harmons at 20-30c.

Cantaloupes were in heavy supply with receipts for the past few days ranging from 7000 to 10,000 crates. Hales best and Paul Rose, loose in standard crates, jobbed at 79-95c on 24s-27s.

The fig market was weak with heavy receipts of local stock. Local Brunswicks moved slowly at 2-5c per lb., few higher. Black Missions ranged from 30-50c per flat of 6-7 lbs., with 15 lb. flats bringing 90c-$1.00; a few 12 lb. flats of best quality stock jobbed as high as $1.00-$1.25.

The grape market was dull with San Joaquin seedless ranging from 15-40c per lug and Muscats 2½-3c per lb. Local Malagas jobbed at 35-40c per lug.

The lettuce market was about steady with Santa Maria, Guadalupe, and San Luis Obispo dry pack 4s bringing $1.50-$2.00.

Yucaipa Hale peaches were stronger under lighter receipts, with large stock jobbing as high as 5-6c. Elbertas brought 2½-3½c with Lovells at 1½-2c. Local Elbertas jobbed at 2½-3c on small stock, 3c on medium. Pears were in over supply and the market continued dull.

Loval quinces brought 2-3c er lb.

ROLPH LEADS YOUNG IN RACE FOR GOVERNOR

nomination by Thomas Allan Box and Norman R. Smith.

Harry L. Englebright, Nevada City, was unopposed for both the Republican and Democratic nominations.

In the third district C. F. Curry was assured of another term in Washington when no Republican opposition developed, although H. F. Boke, Napa, did run as a Democrat.

Florence P. Kahn, San Francisco, easily won the Republican nomination in the fourth district, being opposed by Harry W. Hutton, San Francisco.

Richard J. Welch, ran as both a Republican and Democrat and apparently won out in a stiff battle against George J. Steiger, municipal judge of San Francisco.

In the sixth district Albert E. Carter won the Republican nomination.

Henry E. Barbour, Fresno, of the seventh district was not opposed for either the Democratic or Republican nominations, a distinction he has enjoyed for several terms.

Arthur M. Free won the Republican nomination in the eighth district.

William E. Evans, Republican, was not opposed in the ninth.

Dockweiler Wins

John F. Dockweiler, Los Angeles, apparently was victor for the Republican nomination in the tenth district as was Phil D. Swing of the eleventh, running as both a Republican and Democrat.

A surprising feature of the primary was that Rolph ran second in Los Angeles, the Fitts stronghold.

A divided dry vote was held to be partly responsible for the strong showing of the San Francisco candidate.

Young had received the endorsement of the California Anti-Saloon league but many leaders in the cause of prohibition refused to follow the organization program and supported Fitts.

While Rolph said nothing in his campaign in regard to prohibition, it was well known that he has always been in favor of modification of the Volstead act.

The bulk of the Fitts strength was in Southern California while Rolph and Young divided the northern California vote, with Rolph leading in his home city of San Francisco.

Another division, and an important one, was that dry leaders were split on Fitts and Young, both ardent prohibitionists. Rolph, long known as a modificationist, declined to say anything in regard to prohibition during his campaign but his opponents stressed his anti-prohibition statements of other years.

FUNERAL FOR CHANEY TO BE ON THURSDAY

but was believed recovering until he was stricken with the fatal hemorrhage. He was talking quietly with his wife and son, Creighton, a few minutes before he died.

He had talked the day before his death of plans for his second talking picture, "Chari Bebi," which he had selected himself. The role would have required his greatest skill in changing his features, for which he was famous.

Chaney's ability to achieve varied facial expressions was due in a large measure to his early training in conversing with his parents, both of whom were deaf mutes. All their children, however, were normal.

The affection held for Chaney by his audiences was shown during the last days of his illness, when thousands of telephone calls deluged the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Scores of persons offered their blood when transfusions were resorted to in an attempt to save his life.

The funeral services will begin at 2 o'clock in a Los Angeles chapel and will be attended by only a few friends. Later the cortege will escort the veteran actor to his last resting place a few miles away.

Active pallbearers will be John Jeske, Clinton Lyle, R. L. Hickley, Phil Epstein, William Duntry and Claude I. Parker. Among the screen notables who will serve as honorary pallbearers are Louis B. Mayer, General Smedley D. Butler, Irving G. Thalberg, Hunt Stromberg, Milton M. Cohen, Paul Bern, Chester Vanderlip, Dr. John C Webster, Tod Browning, Harry Carey, Lionel Barrymore, Ramon Navarro, William Haines, Lawrence Tibbett, Harry Rapf, Cliff Edwards, Fred Niblo, Edgar Selwyn and Wallace Beery.

IN FRONT

E. B. Trago, president of the F. P. Nickey Hardware company, who is the leading candidate for the position of county treasurer. He will be on the ballot in November.

BRIDGE APPROACHES READY IN 2 WEEKS

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 27.—Approaches to both ends of the new Lido isle bridge will be completed in about two weeks, according to David G. Duncan, sales manager for Lido isle here.

By that time also it is expected that a paved road will be completed all the way around the island. It is now being completed as far as the clubhouse.

Rapid progress is being made in completing the installation of gas, water, sewer and other utility connections, and in less than two months Duncan predicts that the entire $1,170,000 improvement will be a reality.

DEATHS

A WORD OF COMFORT

If your will is paralyzed there is poison at work in your system. That poison is selfishness and selfcenteredness and self pity.

You say you are powerless to care or to try to rise out of the vale of misery and woe and despair in order that you may perform some worthy work in the world.

It may hurt you to be told what your ailment is, but the truth will out. Begin thinking about what God is wanting you to be, to do and to become, and of how He is depending upon you, and you will discover within yourself the cleansing desire and strength to do, which will transform your life.

Clarence Brady, 42, of Santa Ana, was arrested on a drunk charge last night. He was given a cell in the county jail by Officers Nelson and Adams.

Local Briefs

"The largest strap watch in the world," now being shown in the window of Woodruff-Granas Co., 218 West Fourth St., is a most unusual display. It is a replica, many times enlarged, of the Illinois "Beau Brummel" strap watch. The Statue of Liberty would find it quite a comfortable fit—and an accurate timekeeper also, for one of the amazing features about this large watch is that it keeps accurate time.

Hollywood Artist Paints Scenes At Ritz Golf Course

Out of door scenes being painted in the interior of the Ritz Indoor Golf course at the corner of Fifth and Bush streets, are the work of C. J. McKay of Hollywood, studio artist of Metropolitan pictures.

THANK YOU

I wish to thank my friends, one and all, for the wonderful support given me at the primaries, and if successful at the November election, will do all in my power to merit their confidence.

NOTED FLIERS ARE TO PILOT HUGE AIRSHIP

The Albatross, giant monoplane built at Midway City by the Zenith Aircraft corporation two years ago, is to make an assault on the world's refueling endurance record in the near future, it was learned here today.

Loren W. Mendell and R. B. (Pete) Reinhart, who set a record of 246 hours last summer at Marysville, Mich., will pilot the plane, which will take off from a Los Angeles airport in an attempt to better the record of 27 days aloft recently achieved by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine.

The Albatross was built two years ago and made an attempt from the Orange county airport to set a world's record, failing because of engine trouble, but achieving several world's records for efficiency in carrying maximum loads. Another attempt was made in a takeoff from an Imperial valley airport.

New engines are being installed in the plane at present and it is being carefully groomed for its attack on the world's record. The craft has a wing spread of 90 feet and at the time it was built was the largest monoplane in existence.

INSECT PESTS ARE BANISHED AT CAPE COD

NANTUCKET, Mass., Aug. 27.—(INS)—The mosquito has stung its last. The eradication results against the pest that has broken up many a Cape Cod picnic and caused considerable discomfort to visitors and vacationists has been attained.

After a three year fight against the pests on the Cape in which large sums of money have been used in eradication of the mosquito, Harry V. Lawrence, of Falmouth, chairman of the control work in the upper Cape towns, declared the Nantucket results most satisfactory.

In proving the results obtained, Chairman Lawrence and a party of seventy-seven embarked on a journey to this island to observe the results obtained after the three years fight against the pests. A money prize was offered to any member of the group that found a mosquito. The party went through areas from Polpis to Eels Point and made careful search for traces of the insects, many of the searchers were armed with field glasses as they turned over grass and dirt. Every area which was heavily infested, was visited.

Residents and seasonal visitors to the island were jubilant at the report.

The work against the pests was begun three years back. This spring the town used $15,000, half of which was raised by public subscription, and some 260,000 feet of will be made against the insects." ditch was laid. Each spring a drive

OLD NECROPOLIS OF CARMONA RETURNED

MADRID, Aug. 27.—(UP)—The famous Necropolis of Carmona, one of the most interesting relics of the Roman domination of the Iberian peninsula, recently was transferred to the state by its owner, George Bonsor Saint Martin, a British subject, who has lived in Andalusia nearly all his life.

A royal order was published in the "Gaceta de Madrid" of July 24, 1930, through which the minister of instruction and fine arts, don Elias Tormo, in behalf of King Alfonso, accepted the donation made by Bonsor as he is known in Spain. The government agreed that Bonsor and his family may continue living in the habitable parts of the Necropolis, and that Bonsor will during his life time be the sole director of the museum and excavation works.

With the donation of one of the most interesting relics of the Roman era passes into the hands of the state and it is believed that its future care and upkeep will be assured.

The Necropolis was discovered in 1868, in the course of some road construction, and parts of it were destroyed through ignorance. The Spanish archaeologist, Juan Fernandez Lopez and the painter, George Bonsor, in 1880 bought up most of the land, and began excavations.

By 1885 200 tombs had been discovered and the next year more tombs and an ampitheatre were found. The most important sepulchre found was that of the Elephant—so named because a painting of an elephant, symbol of longevity—was found in it:. It contains a patio, kitchen, bath and several chambers. The Necropolis dates from the second century before Christ to the fourth century A. D. Fernandez died in 1925, willing his portion to Bonsor.

Carmona is a town of 17,000, very near Seville.

The first rivetless cargo vessel, a 2500-barrel tanker fabricated entirely by the arc-welding method, has been launched in Charleston, S. C. Nine workmen only were employed in building the boat.

BIG BUSINESS TO BE STUDIED BY LONDONER

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(INS)—To obtain for Britain the big business ideas of the United States, the London School of Economics is sending Jules Menken to New York to study business schools in New York and other parts of America.

This is the preliminary step to the establishment of a department for business training, administration and research which the School of Economics intends to establish.

Menken will be the first principal of this department. He is a professional advisor on economics, marketing and the application of economic statistics to business. He began his study of economics at Columbia University and completed it at Cambridge University.

"We know already that American methods are not applicable in their entirety," says Menken, "because their problems differ in some respects from ours.

"In America you have mass distribution, in addition to mass production. In England you have mass production, but not on the same scale as in America, and there is nothing which can be called mass distribution.

"The American home market is also infinitely bigger than ours—$600,000,000 against $225,000,000. But their schools of business have been immensely successful, and are bound to be fruitful sources of study."

SIDEWALK CAFE IS POPULAR IN HAVANA

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 27.—(INS)—The continental sidewalk cafe which made its first appearance here several weeks ago as an experiment under government provisional consent today had become an established institution of this resort.

With the decision of officials that the sidewalk retreats will in no way impair traffic, the provinional permission was recalled and authority granted for widespread establishment of the popular lounging places. As a result, hundreds of the American tourists now in the city this week have begun flocking to the new cafes with such ardor that officials are predicting they will soon become one of Havana's most popular resort institutions. The Prado, the city's beautiful main downtown thoroughfare, is particularly favored as a site for the cafes because of its prestige as a gathering place for the elite of the resort.

ARCHITECT PUZZLES OVER OLD BUILDING

MILFORD, Conn., Aug. 27.—The Freelove Baldwin Stow house here, which is to house the Milford Historical society of which J. P. Morgan has recently become a contributing member and which he had aided in purchasing, is a mystery to J. Frederick Kelly, of New Haven, one of the leading experts in colonial architecture. The house is one of the "most interesting examples of Seventeenth century homes standing today," according to Kelly, "but it does not conform to any of the conventional plans which were fairly well standardized in Connecticut."

The old house, which has been standing unnoticed for years and permitted to go to ruin without man's thought, has two chimneys and a roof of purlin and ridge system. Kelly finds evidence of a chimney having been added to the original house, but he fails to find that the roof has ever been patched so as to support his original theory that the house was built with one chimney and then remodelled by the removal of the chimney and its replacement by two.

The house was the homestead of the Eels and Stow families, original settlers here. From the Eels family Morgan is descended. Kelly believes the house was built as a "salt-box" house in the late 1600's, and reconstructed before the revolution. As matter stands he places the house of 1720 construction in its present stage. But he is curious as to how it was changed.

Kelly also found "dog-legged" stairs in the house, something he has found in no other Connecticut house, and he has been in many, perpetuating their plans.

Talking on the subject "How the Old Fogy Looks At It," W. Maxwell Burke entertained the 20-30 club at the regular weekly meeting held last night at the Santa Ana cafe.

With R. M. Conklin in charge of the program, a very enjoyable meeting was held. Burke told of the change in fashions and customs of several years ago and interspersed his talk with humorous experiences.

Harry Jensen offered two vocal solos . He was accompanied at the piano by Duncan Harnois. Lee Finley, president, was absent, his place being filled by Frank Humphrey.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the Santa Ana cafe next Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. It will be a closed meeting and will feature reports of the state convention of 20-30 clubs to be held at San Jose from August 29 to September 1. Lee Finley and Tevis Westgate will represent the Santa Ana club at the conclave.

What is supposed to be the first undersea class room in the world has just been organized by Dr. F. Person, of the University of Miami, in Florida.

NEW MAIL BOXES INSTALLED HERE

Six shiney, new relay mail boxes, holding from 150 to 200 pounds of mail arrived yesterday morning at the Santa Ana post office. The new boxes, according to L. F. Harvey, superintendent of mails, are to be used only for the convenience of the mail carriers.

The old mail boxes were used as a combination for both the carriers and the public but the people will not have access to the new boxes. Many carriers have 100 to 150 pounds of mail, explained Harvey, whereas they should only carry 50 pounds at the maximum. This is where the relay boxes are to be used. Instead of making trips back to the post office the carriers can put all their mail in the boxes and save much time and work, Harvey explained.

Two of the boxes are in use already, it was reported. The others will be placed where there is the most need for them.

PERU LEADERS TO ARREST FOREIGNERS

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Thirty prominent persons, including some foreigners, were ordered arrested today as the Peruvian military government prepared to bring to account those who profited by the 11-year dictatorship of the former president, Augusto B. Leguia.

The names of the persons wanted were not made public, nor the nationalities of the foreigners. Their identities probably will be known only as they are rounded up and brought before representatives of the newly formed government to answer to whatever charges may be placed against them.

Leguia, the indomitable figure who successfully governed Peru for 11 years, lay meanwhile in a serious condition aboard the Peruvian warship Admiral Grau in Call harbor. Leguit was afflicted with uremia, an ailment from which he has been a chronic sufferer for the past four years.

The deposed president, now virtually a prisoner of the military government, was visited four times yesterday by Dr. Donald McCornack, one of the directors of the British-American hospital here. The physician could not be reached for a comment on Leguia's condition, but it was learned that the former president was running a temperature of 100.4 degrees.

It will undoubtedly be one of the most exclusive buttonhole filling societies of the world.

WYLIE B. ALLEN TO OPEN STORE IN SANTA ANA

One of the oldest and best known music houses in Southern California will be represented in Santa Ana commencing Thursday, with the opening of the Santa Ana store of the Wylie B. Allen company. The first store of this pioneer firm was established in San Jose in 1873. The Santa Ana branch, which will be located at 420 West Fourth street, will have its formal opening on Friday, although it will open its doors on Thursday.

Harry H. Clubb, an accomplished musician who has trained hundreds of boys and girls in band music and who has organized many children's bands, will be manager of the store, and will nave as his assistant Howard S. Jones, formerly of Pittsburgh. The two men are moving with their families to Santa Ana.

Clubb has started 1200 children in band music in the last ten years and stated that he was considering organizing a boys' band in Santa Ana. He has been deeply interested in music since childhood, when at an early age he mastered the harmonica, cornet, fife, violin and organ. During the Spanish American war he was band master of the first Wyoming infantry. After the war he continued his musical career by finding employment with a music house and later went in the music business for himself. His boys' band at Santa Barbara, where he was located for a time, grew until it numbered 154 members.

The Wylie B. Allen company, which is bringing Clubb to Santa Ana as its store manager, has for its slogan "The maximum value, per dollar invested," and has many friends throughout the entire Pacific coast where its store are located. The firm takes great pride in the value given and the service rendered through its many branches.

E. Palmer Tucker, in charge of the Southern California district of Los Angeles, is president of the company which has been in business on the Pacific coast for the last 57 years, and has been connected with the Wylie B. Allen company since 1907, after entering the musical instrument business in 1900. He is a member of the board of directors of the Bank of Italy, Lincoln Mortgage company and Monte Rio corporation and is president and director of the Music Trades association of Southern California.

The Santa Ana store of this pioneer music house will handle only radio receiving sets and pianos at the outset of its operations in this distrct.

Says Jones Liquor Law Sponsored By Justice Division

SEATTLE, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Authorship of the "Jones five and ten law" was disclaimed by Sen. Wesley L. Jones today when he refused to accept the challenge of Ralph A. Hoor, wet Republican congressional candidate, to debate prohibition in the primary campaign.

The "five and ten" law, Jones said, came from the department of justice.

"I introduced it at their request," he said.

Jones refrained from commenting upon criticism recently directed at the law by George W. Wickersham, chairman of President Hoover's law enforcement commission. Horr had listed the law as one subject to be debated.

Although declining to participate in the primary battles. Jones reaffirmed his support of the 18th amendment and dry legislation.

MOTIVE IN BRUTAL SLAYING IS SOUGHT

ENSENADA, Lower California, Mex., Aug. 27.—(UP)—A motive for the brutal slaying of Francis Conlon, 24, Monrovia, Calif., business man and his fiancee, Lois Marion Kentle, Los Angeles sorority girl, was sought by Mexican and American authorities today.

The bodies of the couple, stabbed to death by an unknown assailant, were found on the beac hhere yesterday. Near the spot were evidences of a camping ground that evidently had been hastily broken up, police said.

There appeared to be no motive for the murders, the American consul at the Lower California resort told the girl's relatives. They apparently were strolling along the beach when their slayer crept up on them.

Mr. and Mrs. John De Wild, of Vista, Calif., who started for Ensenada with the young couple, were located today by San Diego authorities. They reported that they turned back below Ti Juana on Monday in the belief that Conlon and his fiancee also had returned.

Miss Kentle was president for two years of the National Phi Nu sorority chapter of the University of California at Los Angeles. She was prominent in alumni affairs.

FARM CENTERS TO DISCUSS DIVISION

A business meeting of the Fullerton-Placentia Farm center will be held at 7:30 p. m. today at the chamber of commerce hall at Placentia. The meeting will be held to discuss a proposed plan to divide the organization into two centers.

J. A. Priser, president of the Placentia-Fullerton district, will act as chairman of the meeting. Another problem which will be discussed in connection with the proposed segregation of the two districts is the question of distributing their funds. E. E. Campbell, president of the Orange County Farm bureau, J. W. Crill, vice president, and R. D. Flaherty, executive secretary, are to represent the Orange County Farm bureau at the meeting.

LONGER SKIRTS AND CROONING ALTER DANCING

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27.—(UP)—The popular Terpsichore is undergoing a reform, according to a consensus of opinion among Cleveland dancing instructors.

The American dance hall, which for years has been the scene of the Charleston, the Black Bottom, the Bobby Jones, the Bunny Hug and others of similar character but more recent origin, will soon have witnessed a complete transformation that will bring back dances of lithe, swaying, graceful movements forgotten during the heyday of King Jazz, teachers say. Already the transformation has begun with dance hall habitues doing a shuffling, aimless routine much unlike that of its recent predecessors. This uncertainty of movement is interpreted as a wavering on the part of young America to adhere to the old steps or to develop new ones along similar lines. The shuffling routine, in turn, is predicted to succumb to a new one which will be bred in grace, symmetry, and a certain air of stateliness, instructors aver.

New modes of dress and the growing popularity of the ballad are ascribed as responsible for the change. According to Walter U. Soby, secretary-treasurer of the Dancing Masters of America, long skirts assume the credit.

"When the flappers first put on long skirts last fall," Soby opines, "they tried to cavort just as they had with short skirts. They galloped around the dance floors and that wasn't becoming in long dress. The girls didn't look cute. Cutting-up in short skirts and boyish form silhouettes was a different proposition. Pretty soon the brighter girls began to catch on. They realized that to make the exciting new styles effective, they would have to change their manners."

The growing popularity of crooning through the medium of the radio, wrought an effect upon dancing, as well as new stateliness in dress, in the belief of Miss Margaret Gibbons, principal of the Ohio Dancing Teachers association.

"Crooning has very slow rhythm," is the way she explains it. "It's soft and sentimental. Strangleholds and galloping just do not match up with it. With the long dresses to make the girls look dignified and sweet and music to make them feel that way, the rough-handed gyrating shieks have been forced out of fashion."

STUDIO PREVIEW AT FOX BD'WAY HOUSE TONIGHT

A studio review of Director Frank Borzage's latest all-talking Fox Movietone picture ,the first big preview to come to a Santa Ana theater in more than a year's time, will be shown at the Fox Broadway theater tonight at 8 o'clock, according to an announcement made today by Norman Sprowl, Fox theaters manager here.

"Santa Ana has long been off the list of cities to get the high class previews, because in the past, it has been ruined as a preview town, through the showing of so many 'fake' previews," Sprowl said today, in commenting on the picture to come here tomorrow night.

"It was through my efforts that we have been able to induce the Fox people to again come to Santa Ana with their big previews and I have reserved 50 seats at the theater for the executives of th ecompany and the actors in the show. I cannot name the picture as I do not know its name. I do know that it is the latest Fox production, never before shown and that the director is Frank Borzage, who directed "Seventh Heaven" and other of the famous Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell productions."

Santa Ana is to get other Fox previews in the future, according to Sprowl, who returned here from Los Angeles yesterday where he was in conference with Barney Wolf, Fox executive.

PRESIDENT HOOVER TO LIGHT BEACON

CHICAGO, Aug. 27. — (UP) — President Hoover will press a button in the White House at Washington at 9 o'clock tonight to light the world's most brilliant air beacon, which towers nearly 700 feet above the ground on the roof of the Palmolive building here.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, for whom the beacon has been named, was invited to attend the dedicatory ceremonies here, but it was unknown whether he would be present. Scores of famous aviators, here for the National Air races, will watch the beacon, which will guide them in future flights, come to light.

That certain colors may increase the strength of buildings is a theory advanced by an English scientist who has found that painting steel blue reduces the effect of the sun's rays on it.

REFUGEE FROM MEXICAN ARMY NOW RANCHER

TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 27.—There resides in this border town a rancher who has a good idea of how Napoleon felt when he was banished to St. Helena to ponder the vicissitudes of war.

He is the former General Francisco Robles Manzo, 260-pound exunder-secretary of war of Mexico, commander of Sonora and the conqueror of the Yaquis. Today, he is a political refugee from his native country.

In the 1929 Escobar rebellion, General Manzo served as commander of all rebel forces in northwestern Mexico. With the defeat of his army by the federals, he was driven across the international boundary, leaving behind him a fortune accumulated after years of labor in his home at Ortiz, Sonora, Mexico.

Despite his comparatively low estate here, the once noted military leader may look across the boundary of his mother country to a number of economic achievements which still stand as monuments in Ortiz to his enterprise. In making his escape, he left behind 5,600 head of cattle, a $25,000 light and power system, a modern water which he founded, extensive ranching interests, some 200 miles of improved highways in and adjacent to Ortiz, and modern barracks housing some 2,000 soldiers whom he commanded.

"Whatever glory that was once mine was wiped out in a moment," he said, smiling sadly. "But I still have my wife and four children and I am a good rancher—so perhaps I should not be despondent. There still may be brighter days ahead."

And the once highly honored federal officer, clad now in dungarees, goes about his work as any other Mexican laborer. And occasionally from his lips sound Mexican National anthems he loves so well. Incidentally, one of General Manzo's favorite historic characters is Napoleon.

"IRON POT" PROVES TO BE EGYPT RELIC

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 27.—(UP)—W. H. Long scrubbed viciously at a blackened iron vessel which he believed to be an iron pot, probably used by early American pioneers. He had purchased it in an obscure junk shop here.

The black coating proved to be asphalt. As it fell away strange designs were revealed. The vessel was of copper and was covered with symbols. Long took it to Edward Butts, curator at the museum at the public library.

Butts was amazed. He traced out a design of the sphinx with a tail, historical symbols and a Hebrew inscription translated as the dying words of Jacob to his son.

"It is a rare thing," Butts said. "It undoubtedly was made in Egypt during the time of the Pharaohs, long before the Christain era."

The pot, which by some unexplained distribution had found its way through the years, was sent to eastern museum curators for closer classification.

Black fog occurs at sub-zero temperature and appears to be a precipitation of heavy semi-fluid water particles which seem to absorb the sun's rays.

TRYING TO ESCAPE NEW YORK HEAT

Here's what happens when New Yorkers try to escape from crowds on a torrid day by going to the beach. The scene's at world-famous Coney Island, where more than a million hot, perspiring residents of America's largest city swarmed along the shore the other day—and found their neighbors there, too, each on his own grain of sand! Other beaches in the New York area presented similar pictures during the recent nation-wide heat wave.

FUR CENTER IN CHINA RUINED BY BIG TAXES

PEIPING, Aug. 27. — (UP)—Ruination of Kalgan, on the Sino-Mongolian border, once the active center of fur-buying in the Far East, is reported by the few fur-buyers who have visited the place this year. China's civil wars and excessive taxes, combined with the Outer Mongolia recently declare ports to China, are responsible for deterioration of Kalgan.

Five years ago, the fur-buyers declare, Kalgan in the summer was almost a resort, filled with foreign and Chinese fur-buyers. This summer it has languished, with practically no visitors.

At that time there ware 60 tanneries in Hsuanhuafu, near Kalgan. By last year, the number had dwindled to 30, and this summer there were only 12.

Foreigners who have visited Outer Mongolia recently declare that vast area is under domination of Soviet Russia, and an embargo has been imposed on trade with China proper, in order to divert the fur trade through Harbin to Vladivostock.

The embargo is not so serious, however, as innumerable taxes imposed in North China, make it impossible for traders to compete in the world fur market. Twenty-eight separate taxes are now collected on goods brought from Kalgan to Tientsin. Most of these taxes are "illegal," according to agreements with foreign countries, but protests have no effect in abolishing them.

Taxes change from day to day, so that traders cannot compute in advance what they will have to pay. This uncertainty virtually has killed the trade.

Trees Also Suffer From Bad Sun Burn

STAMFORD, Conn., Aug. 27. — (UP).—Scientists have known for a long time that trees eat, sleep, digest, freeze and strangle themselves after the manner of humans. Now comes forward the Bartlett Tree Research laboratories of this city to state that trees suffer from sun burn.

"Sun scald," as it is called, is caused by the directing wilting and drying out of bark tissues caused by excessive heat. Low humidity and the drying action of the wind contribute to the sunburn as well as the sun's rays.

Late News From Orange And Nearby Towns

4000 BOTTLES OF MILK DRINK MADE EACH DAY

ORANGE, Aug. 27.—Making a specialty of a malted milk drink, Gordon Dry, Inc. of 168 North Orange street, is turning out from 4000 to 6000 bottles of drink daily, keeping 10 large distributing companies in Southern California supplied.

The Orange bottling concern has been organized for five years but until one year ago, manufactured a complete line of carbonated drinks. At the later date, the firm cut down to only two products, Gordon Chocolate and Gordon Dry gingerale and since that time, has increased the output to the full capacity of the plant.

The newest machinery has been installed to take care of the increasing orders for the malted milk drink. A bottle washing machine turns out 24 bottles a minute and a conveyer takes the battles through the filling machine, which fills the bottles and caps them in one operation. This machine has a capacity of 6000 bottles a day or 250 cases.

From the filling machine, the battles are taken to the giant sterilizing plant, which holds 52 cases at one time. After the liquid is heated and cooled off in this process, it will keep indefinitely. The gingerale is not being pushed at the present time, it was learned from Leon Shadel, manager, because the Gordon chocolate drink is so popular, but 200 cases are made a week.

The Orange firm distributes the drink to three plants in Los Angeles, and one in Santa Ana, Long Beach, Pomona, San Bernardino, San Diego and the Imperial valley. Each distributor has his own bottles but the trademarked cap is used on all bottles.

From two to five barrels of dry milk are used each week and is mixed with 100 to 150 pounds of malted milk and 1200 pounds of sugar. The dry milk and malt are mixed in the powder form into a syrup. In the filling machine, the bottle is first half-filled with syrup and then the other half with water.

The bottling company buys caps from San Francisco, 20,000 gross at a time, or 2,880,000 caps. For the gingerale bottles, elaborate caps and labels are prepared and applied in a special machine. An embossed label is put on the side and neck of the bottle while the top is sealed with gold foil. The bottles are green.

A large amount of water is used in the process of bottling while $40 worth of gas and $25 of power are used each month. All water is chemically treated before being used in a complicated machine, while a carbonator is used for the gingerale.

Among the interesting things at the plant operated by Leon Shadel and C. R. Smith is a collection of bottles and special labels. The plant has also experimented with flavors in the chocolate drinks, but further work in this line had to be postponed to take care of the orders on the plain chocolate product. Five men work to put out the popular drink.

ORANGE JAUNT 43 YEARS AGO IS DESCRIBED

ORANGE, Aug. 27.—A clipping from a Los Angeles paper of September 20, 1887, was recently placed in the hands of a daughter of a pioneer family of Orange. The article follows:

"Some weeks ago Major Jones announced to the council that an invitation had been extended to its members to visit the Palmyra hotel at Orange, and on the 12th instant the council determined to accept, setting Wednesday of this week as the time of the visit. Although many of the councilmen had visited Orange before, yet more of them had an idea that their visit was to be one continual round of pleasure, and it was with some misgivings that they, in company with their wives and friends, gathered at the Commercial street depot at half past 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. When the long train of cars drew up in front of the depot, and it was observed that attached thereto was the parlor car, "T. W. Pierce," which had been placed at the service of the party, it became evident that the occasion was not one of ordinary interest, but that it had been designed by one whose apparent effort was to give his invited guests every opportunity to enjoy their brief holiday in such a manner as would not be forgotten.

"The special car was fitted up with an elegance of design that reminded all of their own drawing-room, and it was difficult for anyone to conceive that after all it was only a car bearing them to a portion of the country of whose recent growth they know little. Traveling in such a car shortened the time between that city and Orange, and before they realized the fact that they were traveling the car was sidetracked at the station, and headed by the President of the Council L. N. Breed and Mrs. Breed, the members of the party found themselves whirling rapidly in carriages along roads on which the dust had been settled by the showers of the early morning. There were in the carriage, Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Breed, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Miller, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frankenfield, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eaton, Mrs. Dr. J. C. Hall of Charleston, Ill., C. Williard, Miss J. A. Gavitt, Miss A. L. Gavitt, F. L. Stearns, Mrs. M. Snyder, M. Todd, A. L. Teal.

"As the above ladies and gentlemen stepped forth from the car they were met by Mr. C. Z. Culver, to whom all were indebted for one of the most pleasant occasions in the history of their lives. Mr. Culver received the guests with a cordiality which placed everyone at ease, and indicating that he had provided carriages, invited all to enter therein. By this time it was a trifle after 6 o'clock, and the duskness of night had commenced to lend its aid in making the surrounding country appear in its most romantic light. As the numerous carriages with their loads of humanity were whirled along the tree lined roads, turning here and there in directions unknow before, it became apparent that wherever the Palmyra hotel might be, the surrounding country was not to be excelled anywhere on the face of the globe. Shortly before 7 o'clock, the hotel, with its every window lit up by unseen gas jets, appeared in close proximity and from the drawing room stole forth strains of music, which foreshadowed the hospitality of Mr. Culver and the manager, J. J. Martin, who with his wife stood waiting at the door to welcome guests. As soon as the visitors had alighted and walked up the pathway to the entrance they felt that they were welcome, and acting in accordance with those feelings were prepared to enjoy every moment of the time which they had set aside for that purpose.

"They were immediately shown to rooms, where they removed all stains of travel,, and it was at this time that they were able to observe with what elegance and taste the Palmyra had been furnished. And not only did the fittings appeal to their artistic nature, but under the gas light the bright blooms and green foliage which had been arranged by tasteful fingers, gave to the general appearance, such an air of warmth that, hungry as they were, the guests became possessed of a feeling of freedom such as had not been experienced for years. Anticipating the arrival of the councilmen and the ladies, Mr. Culver had prepared a banquet which not only satisfied the pangs of hunger but made them wish for a frequent repetition of the occassion. The dining room was thrown open shortly after the guests arrived, and again led by Mr. and Mrs. Breed, the ladies and gentlemen were escorted to the tables set with snowy linen and bright silverware."

NEW BY-LAWS FOR BUILDING AND LOAN BODY

ORANGE, Aug. 27.—Adopting a new constitution and by-laws to supplement the old statutes, the directors of the Orange Building and Loan association held an adjourned session this week.

According to Osman Pixley, secretary, the expanding business of the concern made it necessary to amplify and change the constitution to take care of several technical matters. Pixley pointed out that only one building and loan association in the county, located in Santa Ana, has resources exceeding the Orange concern, which total $3,660,000.

President D. F. Campbell was in charge of the directors' meeting.

According to association officials, the audit of the firm is nearly complete. This was made necessary after charges had been made that an employe had misappropriated funds.

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

The fate of Aline Everett, accused of the murder of her ranch manager, Mortison, is in the hands of the jury, after a trial in which Emil Kurtner, criminologist, has given expert testimony that Mortison had been running or exercising violently just before he was shot while he was seated at a table. Kurtner bases his statement on a chemical analysis of blood of the dead man on a handkerchief belonging to Peter Piper, a newspaper reporter, who was on a vacation in the Sierras, who was the first person at the scene of the murder, with the exception of Mrs. Coak, the ranch housekeeper, who found the body.

Kurtner's testimony also establishes the fact that the two shots in Mortison's body were fired from different guns. He testifies that he believes Mortison was already dead when Aline fired a bullet which entered his lungs. The other bullet severed the manager's jugular vein. The first bullet fired by Aline, which went wild, is found by Peter in the garden.

Others involved in the mystery are Max Everett, Aline's husband; her sister Marjorie, who left the ranch the day of the tragedy and who has sailed for Europe; Julio, the Everett's sheepherder, in love with Mrs. Coak's daughter who has been wronged by Mortison, and an old man who declares he is glad Mortison is dead, as he believes that he practiced witchcraft.

Everett in spite of the accusations that she was in love with Mortison, has never lost faith in his wife. He paces the courthouse grounds while the jury is deliberating.

CHAPTER 23

The suspense that had wound its tightening coils around Max Everett with every turn across the court room choked him with intolerable pain as he recognized Peter's slouching figure. The strain of that tension reached the breaking point as he caught Peter by the arm.

"What are they doing? Aren't they ever coming?" He tried to wet his lips but the words came in a husky whisper from his dry throat.

"Hells bells, isn't somebody looking after you?" Peter whirled him to the light and lifted a startled gaze to Max's drawn face. "Come along." Max obeyed the pressure of Peter's firmly guiding hand dwo nthe aisle to the door at the rear of the courtroom, scarcely conscious of his movement.

"Don't you know," Peter assured him, "that every minute after the first half hour the jury is out makes a verdict of guilty more unlikely? If they're going to convict on a capital charge, they'll do it right off. If they've got to talk it over all night, they're uncertain. And with that uncertainty, they'll never agree unanimously to impose the sentence for murder." Peter did not confide his own growing fear that the jury would "hang," and the whole case be thrown into a second trial. Nothing ruined a murder story like the anti-climax of a re-trial, he told himself, unwilling to admit that his anxiety was less for the story than for the persons who made it.

"What you need is a stiff drink, but I hate to leave you and go to get it," Peter said as they stood on the shadowed porch of the court house.

Max shook his head.

"No," he said. "I don't want that that kind of help." Max had once fallen from a high piece of machinery, dislocating his knee. There were no anaethetics in the construction camp, and his face, as the doctor jerked the joint back into place, had held the same set look which it wore now.

Peter sat down on the wooden steps, leaning against a pillar, and drew Max down beside him.

"Then the next best thing is to talk. It doesn't matter what you say—it won't go any farther—but cut loose, let yourself go. Dig it all out into the open, and let's have a look at it. It's the things you can't bear to look at that hurt most."

"Did you know that Aline had a baby once—and lost it?" Max said unexpectedly. "I've been reminded of that lately. I had to sit there, doing nothing, while she went through it alone. There weren't a darn thing I could do. I couldn't take a single minute of her pain to carry for her. She had wanted that baby so; and then she went through hell—for nothing. I couldn't talk about it afterwards. I hadn't the right—I, who'd gone scot free, while she—"Peter could not see Max's face in the darkness, but he heard the thud of his fist on the step beside him.

"I tell you there's nothing Aline could do—nothing!"—that I would not put in the scale against those hours. Doesn't she know that?" The low voice was sharp with anguish. "And now again—I've just had to sit there doing nothing. Doesn't she know I want nothing on earth so much as to share it, to take it on myself—if I could?"

"That's the devil of it. Nobody can do that, ever." Peter cursed the banality of his words, but Max seemed scarcely to have heard him. His figure was a brooding shadow in the darkness. When he spoke again, after a long silence, his voice was controlled and steady.

"There's so much that Aline doesn't realize," he said meditatively. "Do you know what she said to me when the jury went out and I walked over to the jail with her? The sheriff is a good man—he dropped back and let us have those moments together. She said, 'I've caused you a lot of trouble, Max. I suppose it's silly to say I'm sorry.' Her voice was shaking, but she smiled at me—like a child trying hard not to cry. She said, 'If I—if I should get out of this, I'll try not to cause you any more. But I seem to be a good deal like the sparks—you know, the ones that just naturally fly upward and are born to trouble.' She tried to laugh. It was the most pitiful sound I ever heard. 'Then, when it's too late, I'm sorry. Much good that does!' she said.

"What could I tell her? What could I say when I couldn't think of a thing except what the jury at that moment was doing? We were both helpless now. If only I could be in the room with them and hear what they were saying! But we couldn't even do that. We just had to wait—to wait.

"We'd reached the steps of the jail then and I heard something clatter on the pavement. It was Aline's beaded bag. The sheriff stopped and pick it up, but he did not hand it to her. He just strolled over to the corner of the building and stood there, picking dead leaves off the ivy, with his back turned towards us. The bag had dropped because she had reached out with both hands and gripped my arms.

"'We're not in their power!" she said, and I knew that she too was thinking of the jury. 'It doesn't matter what they decide—not really. They're like the things in the jungle. They can destroy me if they like, but they can't make me yield. They can't say that I whined or begged. I have asked nothing from them—nothing. If they are too stupid to see the truth, we can't help it. Don't you see, it doesn't matter what they say, when at last I know—we both know—that I'm not guilty?"

"I can't describe the look on her face. It was so—so utterly unafraid and, somehow, exalted.

"'They can't touch that," she said.

"I suppose it's true, in a way. But they can send her to prison, for all that. Aline—in prison! And she asked me to think it didn't matter, because she's not guilty of murder. Why, I don't care whether she's guilty or not! I'd a thousand times rather know that she killed him, if that would make sure of her freedom!"

"Well, whatever else happened, she didn't kill him." Peter strove to make his tone at once assured and casual. But Max brushed aside the interruption. The big figure sitting crouched on the step stirred impatiently.

"I only wish," he said wistfully, "that she could have told me what it's all about. I'd have tried hard to understand."

Peter's lifted hand was poised in mid-air, half way to his pipe. The match flared in his fingers. His voice was studiously non-committal.

"You don't believe—what she told?"

"I don't know what to believe. But perhaps I could have helped—if I knew what really happened. I don't know—and I shall never ask. That's the least I can do."

"I'm going to find out!" The impulse to immediate action lifted Peter to his feet.

"Do you think she wants you to?" Max's tone was level. In its careful lack of emphasis Peter read the depth and torture of his doubt.

"I've got to find out who really did kill Mortison—it's becoming a regular complex with me!" Peter's tone was purposely flippant. "I think it's a matter that ought to be cleared up—shall we say, for the sake of the Herald?"

"You think she doesn't know?" Despite his attempt at concealment, Max's voice shook with a half-incredulous hope.

"I'm sure she doesn't know any more about that than you or I do," Peter answered positively. "But if that's the way you feel about it, we've sure got to pull it all out into the clear. I'm going to ask you to stand back and let Mrs. Everett and me work it out between us."

"You mean—it's true—what the district attorney said about her?" Max pushed out the words with difficulty, one by one.

"I mean nothing of the sort!" Peter cursed himself for the ghastly ineptitude of his last words. "I mean that she was on the spot, and saw enough of Mortison, naturally, to know a good deal more about him than you do." The anger dropped out of his voice as he added earnestly: "I'm going to talk it over with her and see what we can collect. I'm giving you a hard job when I ask you to kep out of it. But I will tell you this. There is nothing in life—nothing—that means as much to Aline as your confidence. Your faith in her, or what she thinks is your faith, has been the one thing she's held to."

A broad beam of light was suddenly flung over their shoulders from the window behind them.

"The jury's in!" Peter exclaimed. He leaped to the door, but paused with his hand on the knob. Max had risen also, and stood facing the closed door, his hands clenched at his sides.

"That isn't the only door that has to be opened," Peter said softly. "Are you afraid?"

"Yes,' 'Max breathed. "God knows I'm afraid. But not Aline. There's just one thing I can be eternally sure of—her courage. I don't know what to believe of her—but don't tell her that. Tell her—tell her that her courage is worth the best I can give. Tell her I've never doubted her for one moment!"

LEGALIZED BOXING HIT HARD BLOW BY CAMPBELL'S DEATH: BAER IS FORGIVEN BY WIDOW

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—The death of Frankie Campbell, one of the most promising heavyweights on the Pacific Coast, following his bout with Max Baer, resulted today in rumors that legalized prize fighting in California might suffer as a consequence. According to Dr. Tillman, a brain specialist who attended the fighter, Campbell's brain was knocked loose from his skull.

Baer, a 21-year-old boxer who has been spoken of as a possible contender for heavyweight championship honors, retired to his home in Livermore after being released on bail of $10,000 furnished by the fight promoter, Ancil Hoffman.

The bail was the highest ever set in San Francisco for manslaughter, with which Baer was charged.

Baer was deeply affected by the result of the contest.

"Of course I wanted to win. Before the battle it seemed like the only thing in life. But I didn't—I couldn't guess that such a terrible thing as this could happen."

Campbell's widow forgave Baer for the terrific blows that sent her husband into a state of unconsciousness from which he never returned when she said. "It's all right boy. You didn't mean to do it."

Independent investigations were started today by the state athletic commission and police. They planned to question all persons connected with the fight, including Toby Irwin, referee, who it was claimed had been exhorted to stop the fight before Campbell lost consciousness.

The bout scheduled for 10 rounds ended suddenly in the fifth when Campbell sank to the floor. Up until then it was a savage fight that swept the spectators back into an earlier and more savage age.

Baer hit Campbell a terrific blow in that round that sent the smaller fighter staggering against the ropes. But he didn't go down. Instead he stood there helplessly, his arms at his side, while the "Livermore Larruper" rallied one terrific punch after another to his face and body. Finally, after what seemed hours to the startled spectators, the victim's legs collapsed and he sank slowly to the floor—knocked out.

AFRICAN AIR LINE

PARIS, Aug. 27. — French and Belgian air officials are arranging an air line to reach into the heart of Belgian Congo. This line will carry mail and will be a weekly scheduled affair. It is planned to add passengers and express to the line later. The route will be from Antwerp to Brussels, Paris, Perpignan, Algiers, Gao, Lake Tchad, Fort Lamy and Elizabethville. The service is expected to be extended to Madagascar in the future.

CANZONERI IN POOR SHOWING AGAINST HESS

BY HYPE IGOE
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Goldie Hess, of California, didn't go anything in the way of an 18-karat victory over Tony Canzoneri at the Queensboro stadium last night but he did put an awful kink in Tony's ambition to be the next lightweight champion of the world.

He lost the decision to Tony in ten rounds but Tony lost caste. Tony went so dog-tired trying to spill the unspillable gold one, that they had to give Tony smelling salts when he reached his dressing room.

Tony just did make the grade and he sent folks away vowing that he'll never go the distance with the bristling lightweight king, Al Singer.

Tony was a miserable exhibition. There is no use trying to play peek-a-boo behind that bare fact. He would have been duck soup for Suarez, Berg, Miller or Jimmy McLarnin last night.

It might have been that he was taking no chances with Hess, since he has that important job, on with Singer, but there was no excusing his weariness, his listlessness. He'll be knocked out in three or four rounds by Singer if last night's work was the best he has left.

Hess, mind you, hopped on a train in California, was cooped up for four days, had four days work in a strange climate, took off 15 pounds, and still made Tony look like an ordinary challenger for the Singer tiara.

AIR FIRE FIGHTERS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—Forest fires which have so ravaged forests of the Pacific coast this year will find things a little harder when the aviation club to be organized by local fire departments gets under way. With a proposed membership of 250, the club will aid materially in combatting forest fires by spreading news of them and transporting fire fighters.

JACK HAYWOOD FACES PERTLEY IN MAIN BOUT

Jack Haywood, giant Pasadena negro and one of the hardest-hitting heavyweights in Southern California, makes his first appearance at the Orange County Athletic club tomorrow night when he lines up for a six-round set-to with Vic Pertley, another 200-pounder, in the main event of Promoter H. T. Foust's 34-round "bargain bill."

Haywood has been a main-eventer at Pasadena for two years and occasionally a performer at the Olympic or Hollywood, but has never shown before the clients at Delhi. He has met some of the best known heavies, Mack House, Ernie Owens, Tony Fluente and Vic Alexander included, and will be a favorite to take the measure of Pertley.

The latter is a youngster of considerable promise who boxed at the Delhi arena several months ago.

Promoter Foust plans to use the winner against "Dynamite" Jackson, widely known and highly touted young colored fighter, in a main event next month. Jackson already is under contract.

The Haywood-Pertley affair is only one of seven bouts—three six-rounders and four four-rounders.

A preliminary which Promoter Foust believes will outshine most any battle that ever has been waged in Orange county is the four rounder matching "Wild Man" O'Hannigan and Benny Stinson. O'Hannigan is from Santa Barbara and comes described as the latest thing in battling comedians. Stinson is the young La Habra 155-pounder who has shown unquestioned promise in previous Delhi appearances. O'Hannigan and Stinson met at San Bernardino last week and waged such terrific warware that Foust immediately rematched them.

Other preliminaries are Jack Dunseith, Alhambra, vs. Glen Thompson, Seattle, 175 pounds; Max Hernandez, Anaheim, vs. Johnny Todd, Los Angeles, 160 pounds; Getzell Hood, Los Angeles, vs. Eddie Reinhart, Los Angeles, 175 pounds.

Once again women will be admitted to the arena free if accompanied by escorts holding tickets for the reserved sections.

PLANE RIGHTS

BOSTON, Aug. 27. — Airplane pilots are perfectly within their own rights in flying over private property as long as they maintain a sufficient altitude to comply with U. S. Department of Commerce laws, the Massachusetts supreme court has decreed. The ruling resulted from a suit brought by a property owner who complained that planes flying over his land made too much noise.

'Hack' Wilson Threatens Ruth's Record

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Having accomplished the feat he has been attempting for four years—the breaking of the National league all-time home run record—"Hack" Wilson, Chicago Cubs outfielder, today turned his attention to the difficult task of lifting Babe Ruth's home run crown.

Wilson's 44th homer of the 1930 season, made in the seventh inning of yesterday's game with Pittsburgh, shattered the National league record of 43 made by "Chuck" Klein of the Phillies in 1929, and tied "Hack" with Babe Ruth in the number of homers made this season.

BRITISH, U. S. TRACKSTERS IN BIG DUAL MEET

BY DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Corespondent)

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Track fans from all sections of the country gathered here today for the "Little Olympics"—A dual track and field meet between the British empire and the United States—to be contested tonight at Soldiers' field.

The meet is the first international track and field competition held in the United States since the 1906 Olympic Games at St. Louis, and has attracted widespread interest.

More than 25,000 tickets have been sold and promoters are hopeful that Soldiers' field, which already holds the world record for attendance at prizefights and football games, will house a record track and field crowd.

The British empire-United States meet is second only to the Olympic Games in athletic importance and quality of competition and a program which carries all the color and pageantry of an Olympiad has been arranged for the meet.

Assistant Secretary of State William P. Castle jr., representing President Hoover, will open the meet formally with an address of welcome to the visiting athletes. Following his talk, the athletes,led by an American Legion bugle and drum corps will parade around the track and raise the flags of the two countries. Then buglers, stationed on the highest point of the collandes rising above the brilliantly lighted stadium, will trumpet the call for the opening event and competition will begin.

Fourteen events and a special 100-yard exhibition dash, which will not count in the scoring, are included on the program. All track events will be contested as relays and the field events will be decided on the basis of team scores. Best performances of all competitors being totaled to decide the winner.

TO BROADCAST BOXING MATCH BY TELEVISION

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—An innovation in athletic attractions will be presented tonight when for the first time in history, a boxng bout will go on the air by television.

The principals, "Tuffy" Griffith, middlewestern heavyweight contender, and Stanley Harris, of Chicago, will fight in the WMAQ radio station studio with their handlers and studio attendants as the only witnesses.

Their exhibition will be part of WMAQ and WXAP, the new telethe television sound broadcast over gram, which will be on the air Chicago Daily News. The provision broadcasting station of the Standard Time, will mark the befrom 7 to 7:30 p. m., Central ginning of regular television broadcasts over WXAP.

For the benefit of listeners not equipped with television receiving sets, a blow-by-blow description of the contest will be announced.

He was repeating history in leading the pack at the start. In previous marathons, Pritchard has taken the lead and then fallen back, never sharing in the $15,000 prize money.

AL HITS INTO DOUBLE PLAY

Maybe Dan Cupid has traded his bow and arrow for a baseball bat. Anyway, soon after the world's series is over, Al Simmons, hard-hitting outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Miss Dorothy Kuhn of Jenkintown, Pa., are to be married. This is the first picture taken of them since the announcement of their engagement.

NEW AND LIGHTER GOLF BALL TO BE ONLY ONE SOLD WHEN OLD TYPE SUPPLY EXHAUSTED

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(International News Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The really heinous nature of a ruling, by which a larger and lighter golf ball is to be placed in American circulation after January 1 next, was revealed for the first time today when it was admitted at the offices of the United States Golf association that no other ball is likely to be available to anybody after the dead line in question. As a matter of fact, this wasn't an admission exactly; it appeared to be a boast.

All of the leading manufacturers, it seems, are committed to making only the new 1.68 ball. It even is my understanding that they plan soon to stop turning out the old type of ball in the hope that in the meantime they exhaust the supply and leave no surplus when the bars go up.

Thus it appears that a regulation which everybody deemed to have been aimed mostly at the low-handicap and tournament player, is to be visited alike on J. William Chicklehead, who is improving right straight along and is liable to break 115 almost any day, the new ball, it is said, will do Chicklehead a lot of good, which statement only serves to confirm an impression I have held about America for some time.

They Know What's Best

It seems to be a country composed of 110,000,000 people—and those who know what is best for us.

The populace has only one effective rejoinder in this connection but it seems to suffice. It listens very attentively and then does what pleases its fancy.

In this case, its fancy does not appear to lean to larger and lighter golf balls. These have been available at most courses for upward of a year, yet I dare say that you see one of them being played to one thousand of the others. It is reasonable to assume, therefore, that the average American doesn't want what is best for him. He is fastidious and is very particular about what ball he misses his golf shots with.

As a matter of fact, the whole matter is a legislative stepchild that has been left on the American doorstep.

British Parentage

The child is of British parentage but its care and upbringing is to become strictly an American responsibility. They started it by asking us if we didn't wish a larger and lighter ball. We said yes, and this naturally pleased them immensely.

"That's fine," they replied, "because personally we don't want it at all."

So we are finding ourselves committed to an experiment, to which not even the authors are favorable; in fact, they have turned their backs upon it with marked hauteur and, having persuaded America that it is doing a big thing in a big way, they are prepared to go on hitting the old ball firmly and with much resolution.

I suspect, of course, that the problem, so typical of modern America, will be solved in the modern American way. The "bootleg" ball, pre-1930 stock right out of the old bicycle shop. Ought to have a brisk sale.

VON PORAT SIGNS

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Otto Von Porat will make his first appearance since his knockout by Young Stribling in a ten-round bout with Joe Lohman of Wisconsin at Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.

CHAMPIONS TO STAGE OPENER IN BOWL HERE

Santa Ana and Colton will begin their playoff for the Southern California night baseball championship in the Santa Ana Bowl Friday night.

Representing the National and American lunar leagues, the Stars and Reds will engage in a four-out-of-seven game series.

The second game will be played at Colton next Tuesday, September 2, the third at Santa Ana Friday, September 5, and the fourth at Colton Monday, September 8.

Other games, if necessary, will be held at Santa Ana, Wednesday September 10; at Colton Friday, September 12, and at a park to be decided Monday, September 15.

Arrangements were consummated at a meeting in the offices of the state traffic department in the courthouse here last night.

Cravath Presides

"Gavvy" Cravath, president of the Southern California association, presided. Representatives included Elmer Coble, president of the American Night league; George Peterkin, president of the National Night league, and Hubert Finley and John Wilcox, business managers of the Colton and Santa Ana clubs.

Tickets for reserved seats to the series opener went on sale here today at the El Corral service station, Third and Birch streets, and at Baker's bakery, 214 West Fourth street.

"Eeny" Wilcox and Horace Snow, officials of the local club, are handling the ticket sale.

The main bleacher sections, the "old" stands, will be reserved with pasteboards available at 35 cents. The "new" temporary bleachers will not be reserved. Admittance to them will be 25 cents.

Seating Capacity 3000

The entire seating capacity at the Bowl is approximately 3000.

Colton will have virtually as many, it is understood.

In charging 35 and 25 cents, Santa Ana officials may precipitate a quarrel with the Southern California association which insists on a 50-cent "top." The Southern California association receives 25 per cent of the gross receipts for all games during the series.

Having had its tickets for the first game already printed, Santa Ana proceded to put them on sale today at its own prices. The Stars maintain they have a right to charge whatever they want at their own park. They also argue that their lease with the city for use of the Bowl expressly states that not more than 35 cents shall be charged for any game.

Colton Speeds Additions

Work is being rushed at Colton on additions to the municipal baseball grounds.

Three tiers have been added to the top of the present bleachers. A 110-foot section has been added, providing permanent accommodations for 2100 fans. Portable bleachers seating 1000 more will be moved from the Riverside park for the Santa Ana series.

Santa Ana will be alloted approximately 600 tickets for the second game of the series at Colton next Tuesday. These will not be available until Saturday morning, however.

Umpires for the series will be J. Wilson and R. Smith, premier guessers of the inland loop, and "Shorty" Smith and W. B. Wentz, ranking officials from the National circuit.

BUILDERS BUMP LEGION: TITLE RACE HOT NOW

The Santa Ana City Night Baseball league race is still as wide open as a gate.

Defeated, 7 to 3, by the Orange County Builders' exchange last night, the American Legion dropped from its perch atop the standings, and left half the teams in the league with a chance to sneak through to the wire first.

Ray Griset and John Willcutt shared the pitching burden for the Builders who won the championship for the first half of the split season and will meet the second half winner in a three-game titular series next month. The Builders have had a hard time getting started this half but flashed some of their early season form in turning back the powerful Legionaires.

Earl Jones started for the Veterans. The Builders got to him bright and early, and Bob Nelson had to finish the assignment.

The other half of the scheduled double-header between Peek's market and the Courthouse was postponed on account of the election.

INCREASING INTEREST

JAPAN, Aug. 27.—Aviation in Japan is increasing in interest by leaps and bounds. The Japan Air Transport has recently purchased new planes to add to the Tokyo-Darien and Fukuoka-Shanghai air lines. The present number of ships on the line is 20, and the additional planes had to be purchased to carry the growing number of passengers.

Harry T. Nelson, formerly of the U. S. Air Service and now a member of the Dallas, Tex., Flying club, has perfected a bike-o-plane. It consists of an ordinary bicycle equipped with a set of wings and tail. When driving the wings lift the front wheel of the bicycle into the air.

HOOKS and SLIDES

by William Braucher

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

The report that Jim Bottomley is to be traded away by the Cardinals has stirred the fans, says Sid Keener in the St. Louis Star . . . Sid has been receiving letters protesting the proposed trade . . . the report of a trade started several weeks ago in New York . . . Reporters asked Bottomley about it . . . Jim is said to have replied, "Well, I guess I'm going to see my new manage r tomorrow" . . . since the Cardinals were leaving that night for Boston, it appeared Jim thought he was about to be peddled to Beantown . . . Sam Breadon has nothing to say about the report . . . it so happens the Cards have a promising first baseman named Collins playing with Rochester this season.

IT'S COMMERCE, ETC.

Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, unburdened himself of a few well-chosen remarks the other day about the crass commercial side of baseball.

It seems that some sinister souls had been hinting that Sam's policy of maving up Monday games in St. Louis and making them Sunday double-headers was "cheapening the game," At least Sim so implies. In reply, Breadon frankly admitted that baseball was "a big commercial project."

"Whose game am I cheapening when we play to 177,611 for eight double-headers this summer?" asked Sam. "Of course, if this franchise loses money on a season's play, then the salaries of the players must be reduced the following year.

"The double-headers have made money for the stockholders and the players. Besides that, it afforded extra entertainment and interest for the fans of St. Louis. If left to a vote of the fans, whether they wanted one game or two on Sunday, I am positive there would be a wide majority for the double-headers."

MAKES GOOD READING

Mr. Breadon's remarks will be read with interest by a great many people. It may be that there are some sordid enough to remember the little speech during the hot-stove season, when the matter of salaries and contracts for 1931 come up for discussion.

We are awaiting with pleasure Mr. Breadon's negotiations with one Burleigh Grimes, a pitcher who also has a keen commercial mind. We have just the faintest hunch that Mr. Breadon will not begin to learn about the financial side of baseball until he has a little talk with Mr. Grimes. For if there is anybody in baseball who knows what you're talking about when you speak of commerce, it's that same Grimes.

Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates used to think he knew something about the financial niceties of the game. That was until this spring, when he was rudely apprised of his own ignorance by this same Mr. Grimes. Barney, to be sure, is not alone. Other big league bosses have learned about money from Grimes.

HE TEACHES THEM

That's why Mr. Grimes has been something of a wanderer over the face of the baseball earth. Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, New York, Boston—baseball bigwigs in all these cities have been liberally educated by Mr. Grimes. The professor came, saw, demanded and went his way, leaving the chancellors of the exchequer gasping for breath. For Burleigh thinks of money in a big way.

This year Mr. Grimes' picture was put on the cover of a popular baseball record book. We haven't been told whether or not Mr. Grimes has seen this picture. But if he has, Mr. Breadon is sure to know about it, too. That picture and those double-headers ought to be worth at least a couple of thousand vulgar dollars. And a dollar in St. Louis looks just the same to the mercenary Mr. Grimes as four two-bit pieces in Pittsburgh. Mr. Grimes is funny that way.

SHOOTING with SHUTE

by DENNY SHUTE

What do you do when you are delayed until the foursome ahead of you gets off the green? Do you look down the fairway and plan in your mind what club you'll use and just how you are going to hit the ball?

Take this little tip I learned from watching Johnny Farrell, the National open champion in 1928.

When there is a delay in the game due to others in front of him, Farrell walks clear away from his ball and never gives it another thought. And he never once glances in the direction he must play the shot.

"Many shots are missed after a short delay," the former National Open champion says, "because you let your imagination go to work. You become impatient to move along and when finally you are ready, your swing is too fast. Mentally playing the shot several times during the delay nearly always is disastrous."

Next time you're on a crowded course, watch the impatient ones swinging their clubs or walking around nervously. Invariably they top the ball or hook or slice into the rough.

$604,034.23 Mailed To Anaheim Valencia Growers

250 CARS OF FRUIT SHIPPED IN FIRST POOL

ANAHEIM, Aug. 27.—Checks totaling $604,034.23 are being mailed out by the Anaheim Citrus Fruit association this week for the settlement of the first pool of the season to approximately 350 orange growers, with a net average of $3.46 to the grower, it was announced this morning by Manager Carl A. Monahan.

Two hundred and fifty carloads of valencia oranges have been shipped by the association, totaling 175,354 boxes. Three cars daily are being shipped.

Four pool shipments will be made during the season, which does not close until the middle of October.

No shipments have been made to foreign countries, Mr. Monahan stated, but local prices have held up exceptionally well considering the general condition of the country.

Owing to the wish of the health department of Orange county to suppress the spread of the infantile paralysis by the closing of public services the Alamitos Friends Sunday school has kept up the work among the primary and intermediate pupils by having the teachers of the classes visit their pupils in their homes, leaving work and instructions for home study. This has been a task for the teachers as students cover several miles of territory. Collections have been sent in by the little folk who are awaiting eagerly for word that they may return to Sunday school. The teachers of these classes are Mrs. John Robertson and Mrs. Wendel Jones, beginners; Mrs. Grace Morgan, primary; Mrs. C. N. Jones, winners; Lucile Shackleford, the flyers and upstreamers; Mrs. Ralph Broady, cheerful helpers; Edna Rumgardner, builders. SUICIDE TRY OF LAGUNA WORKER MEETS FAILURE

LAGUNA BEACH, Aug. 27.—William Kolakski, 38, recently of Torrance, was taken to the county hospital and placed under observation following an attempt to hang himself at El Patio cafe on Coast boulevard yesterday.

Kolakski, said to be despondent over foreclosure on property owned by him, placed a towel around his neck and suspended himself from a rafter in the cellar of the cafe. He stood on a box, which he kicked from under himself. His struggles were heard by the proprietor, J. Mallery. Discovering the man still far from dead, he cut him loose with a knife. The chief injury sustained was due to the fall, it is said.

The man was given first aid treatment by Dr. B. B. Mason at the Laguna Beach hospital, then taken to the hospital. He had been employed at the cafe but a few days.

NEW YORK MAN BUYS INTEREST IN L. B. STUDIO

Clyan Hall, who has been the head of the business since it has been located on Canyon road, will still be actively interested in the work.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurber have taken the Ann Carlson cottage on Monterey street for the present and expressed themselves as interested in the artistic life of Laguna and said that they could not be quoted too enthusiastically in praise of the climate and beauty of this city.

The Craftsman studio is one of the most important industries in this vicinity and perhaps reaches more parts of the country than any other. The New York representative, Howard G. Selden, was the man who recommended Mr. Thurber's coming here and expects to handle more and more of the home-made brass and copper art novelties made here for gift shops throughout the territory east of the Rocky mountains.

The work shop employs six men and three girls working full time to turn out the novelties which are ordered from every state in the union.

Federal Architect Makes Post Office Site Survey

DETAILS ABOUT BUILDING HERE ARE REVEALED

Preparatory to drawing plans and specifications for Santa Ana's $225,000 Federal building, E. B. Morris, of Washington, D. C., architect for the United States treasury department, today had completed a thorough investigation of the site on Bush street, between Sixth and Seventh street, on which actual construction probably will begin soon after January 1.

Morris was accompanied here by his young son and Harry B. Westgate, postmaster at Pomona. They conferred with Postmaster T. E. Stephenson of Santa Ana yesterday.

Construction of a $160,000 Federal building at Pomona will be carried on simultaneously with the Santa Ana work, the two operations having been combined, so Westgate was anxious to team up with Morris and Stephenson in investigations here.

Morris said that many of the large and handsome trees on the Santa Ana site would be preserved. The structure here will be two stories. A large basement, the entire first floor and some of the second will be devoted to the post office department. Suites on the second floor will be occupied by such as the agriculture department, income tax collector, United States bank examiner, post office inspector, and army and navy recruiting officers.

Morris reiterated previous announcements that the building contract will be let immediately after plans are drawn. He said the treasury department has many other projects ahead and is anxious to speed operations already on its program.

Approximately $200,000 is available for the actual building in Santa Ana. The original appropriation was $225,000. Part of this was exhausted in the purchase of the site which measures 250 feet on Bush street and is 150 feet deep.

Brooks of the steamer Fairfax today was acquitted of all guilt in connection with the crash of the Fairfax and the oil tanker Pinthis off Scituate, Mass., June 10, in a report made public by the steamboat inspection service of the commerce department. Forty-nine persons lost their lives in the tragedy.

AS AIR RACES OPENED AT CHICAGO

SALOME VISION IS FEATURE OF BAND PROGRAM

On tomorrow's concert program to be presented in Birch park at 7:30 p. m., the Santa Ana Municipal Band is planning to feature a novel modern work, entitled "A Vision of Salome," by J. Bodewalt Lampe, according to D. C. Cianfoni, director of the popular local musical organization. This work, a descriptive fantasie, is imaginative, and programmatic in type.

A brief synopsis will prove of interest to lovers of the picturesque. Salome has been repulsed by John the Baptist after she has exhausted all her powers to enchant him. She appears before King Herod at his birthday feast. She dances at his request. Herod is pleased with her dancing and promises to grant whatever she may ask. Salome, still smarting under her repulse and urged by her mother, Herodias, asks for the head of John the Baptist. Herod, with great reluctance, grants her request.

The feast is over; the head of John is brought in a charger to Salome, whose revenge is now complete—for John, who would not as much as turn his head to look at her, shall now behold her in all her beauty. In her mad frenzy she caresses and kisses the head. She attempts to dance but is stricken with fear. She is terrified as she realizes the horror of what she has done. She is overwhelmed, abject, but a ray of hope flashes over her sinking soul; can she earn forgiveness by constant prayer and sacrifice? She swoons in a heap upon the floor.

Other numbers of special interest will include presentation of the pleasing overture, "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna" by Franz von Suppe, noted Belgian composer and conductor, who won sensational fame during his lifetime in the field of light opera, enjoying a vogue similar to that of Offenbach.

An appealing Oriental dance suite in three movements, the "Ballet Egyptian" by Luigini, modern French composer, who also won recognition during recent years in the field of operetta, will be heard, as well as another selection from light opera, "The Three Twins," by Horschna.

CAMPAIGN POST-MORTEMS

Most of us will now close the campaign issues with the good old self-evident declaration that the losers lost because they didn't get enough votes.

IT WAS A CLEAN CAMPAIGN, ALL BUT THE MUD-SLINGING.

And did you hear of the Laguna Beach lady who walked four blocks to the polls only to find out it was just a primary?

And the Placentia Democrat who thought he could vote for Al Smith?

NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL GOOD CANDIDATES AND POLITICAL CLUBS TO COME TO THE AID OF THEIR CREDITORS.

There's one thing certain, to win in Orange county you've got to put up a campaign and a good one, at that. We common folks must be shown, Missouri or no Missouri.

It's a great process, turning candidates into office-holders or also-rans, as the case may be. The socializing benefits of a political campaign are greater in a way than the public services to be rendered.

And the way the bitter political enemies the day before turn back into good friends the day after is simply wonderful! The reason of this is because in the heat of battle each one has stretched the truth a little and nobody likes company better than a liar. A little lying now and then is relished by the worst of politicians.

The only thing we miss in these California elections are the riots and fistic combats outside the polling places like we used to see in the bad old days of the saloon.

VIEWS OF THE NEWS

Another thing that takes the joy out of life of an automobile owner is the fact that the more the car costs the harder it is to find a place to park it.

A seventeen-year-old Rhode Island boy won the Thomas A. Edison scholarship over forty-eight other contestants, but the unfortunate part is that some champion tree-sitter will be remembered longer.

Mr. Hoover has appointed a commission to look into the matter of diminishing home-ownership. If it accomplishes anything it will have to recommend shutting down the automobile and radio factories, closing the beauty shops and miniature golf courses, and bringing back the good old five-cent hamburger.

THE "RUN-OFF"

You candidates who ran and lost,
We bid you now adieu;
It matters not how much it cost,
You're through!

To you who in the "run-off" got,
Take now this timely cue;
Don't think you're through for you are not,
You two!

The "run-off" will begin for fair,
In six weeks—even less;
And half of you will get the air,
I guess!

STUDY PORT DRAINAGE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 27.—Airport drainage, a problem that has proven difficult to solve, is the subject of much research by the American Engineering Builders' association and the council, the American Road Aeronautics branch of the U. S. Department of Commerce. Adequate drainage and surfacing of airports is essential, because faulty construction of these systems has been responsible for accidents to planes in landing and taking off in the past.

4-H CLUBS TO HOLD CONCLAVE IN SACRAMENTO

BY ERIC E. EASTMAN
Assistant Farm Advisor

The Annual 4-H Club convention is to be held this year on the third, fourth and fifth of September at the University farm, near Davis, as usual. The club leaders from all parts of the county are busy selecting and preening their delegates so that the delegation may bring credit to the county. The selection this year is particularly difficult as the advanced date of the convention makes the selection of the project winners impossible, as most of the projects are still under way. Consequently the boy is being selected who in the opinion of the leader will not only profit from the educational opportunities of the trip himself but who will also bring back to his club the inspiration for more and better club work which he has acquired at the Davis convention.

The delegates are sent to the convention by the Farm bureau; interested parents and friends furnishing and driving their cars. The inland route is usually taken to the convention and the Coast Route on the return, so that the agriculture of both the interior valleys and the coast route may be observed. Stops are made at places of historic, as well as of agricultural interest. The Davis convention is one of the outstanding features of the 4-H educational work among rural boys and girls.

The tentative list of delegates from Orange county follow: Buena Park club: Robert Cole, delegate; Robert Thomas and Robert Smith, alternates. Costa Mesa: Clark Sneve, delegate; Philip Cassel, alternate. Clover Leaf club of Yorba Linda: Albert Yerington, delegate; Stanton Williams and Glibert May, alternates. Yorba Linda Councilors: Donald Walker, delegate; Leonard Scott and Robert Carter, alternates. Fullerton club: Clarence Lotze, delegate; Lorin Lutschg and Frank Watts, alternates. Garden Grove club: Murray Jackson and Tyrus Chapman, delegates; John Chaffee and Keith Echols, alternates. Katella club: Joseph Hughes, delegate. Santa Ana club: Boyd Whitney, delegate; Billy Brooks and Alfred Eastman, alternates. San Juan Capistrano club: Robert Cook, delegate. Savanna club: Richard Clark, delegate; Edward Atwater and Carlos Foster, alternates. Tustin club: Robert Pankey, delegate; Charles Kiser, alternate. Villa Park club: Frank Christian jr., delegate. West Orange club: Reese Allison, delegate; Orlando Courtney and Howard Davis, alternates.

Recall Visits Of Chaney to Former Register Employe

Many Santa Anans remember Lon Chaney as a nephew of Mrs. Kennedy Roberts, for many years society and telegraph editor of the Santa Ana Register. Chaney, in the days when the Roberts family lived on West Seventeenth street near Durant street, visited at the home of his relatives here.

Mrs. Roberts was with The Register for seven or eight years, and during her residence in Santa Ana was one of its most active and best known women. The family moved to Los Angeles about 15 years ago. Mrs. Roberts died a few months ago.

TUNNEL ENTRY ONLY EXIT

There is something new under the sun—a railroad tunnel with but one portal. And trains leave it by the same portal through which they enter; no train ever goes through it. It's engineering solution of a problem on Southern Pacific's Cascade line in southern Oregon. A turn-around was needed at this point. Odell lake was close to tracks on one side; the Cascade mountains on the other. So a tunnel was bored, a train goes in there on one segment of the "Y" track, and back out over the other, completely turned around.

SECRETARY PRAISES 2 PEACE DOCUMENTS

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—On the second anniversary of the signing of the Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war, Assistant Secretary of State Castle today hailed it and the London naval treaty as definite advances toward international peace, and sought to answer critics of both documents.

Speaking before a luncheon given by the Chicago World Peace Day committee, Castle forecast that when the London treaty expires five years hence the signatory nations will feel safe in making more drastic naval cuts.

Castle said the Kellogg pact and the naval treaty had been criticized by extremists on both sides—by Militarists, who considered the committments too binding and by Pacifists, who believed they were not thoroughgoing enough.

It has been found, by a large insurance company, that the home is positively the cause of the most number of non-fatal injuries.

Rolf McPherson Fails In Effort To Win Audience

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Rolf McPherson, son of Aimee Semple McPherson of Angelus temple fame, tried to emulate the soul saving propensities of his mother here last night with scant success.

A heterogeneous crowd of 1000 persons, mostly curious, gathered in the tent and listened apathetically while the youthful, long sideburned orator told how a "pitcher of joy was poured out upon my soul like ice water."

The address apparently touched them very little, however, for when young McPherson called for a show of hands from those who wanted him to pray for them. The audience simply stared.

Young McPherson read a telegram from his much publicized mother which he had received shortly before the meeting began. It read:

"Darling son—proud of you. Never touched mother. Face needed no lift. Stay at your post and fight the good fight of faith. Praying for you."

PRIZES GIVEN TO EXCHANGE CLUB GOLFERS

Despite the fact that the team entered by the Santa Ana Exchange club did not win the miniature golf match with a team from the Newport Beach Exchange club last Thursday, the local service club yesterday presented prizes to Dr. John Wehrly and Merle Morris, who turned in the low and high scores respectively. The presentation was made at the clubs' meeting yesterday noon in the Santa Ana cafe.

The beach players won three to two and today the Santa Ana team is anticipating a return match to be played at Newport Beach in the near future.

Harry Lewis was the speaker at yesterday's meeting and told experiences on his recent trip to South America. Kemper Taylor was in charge of the program and introduced Lewis. W. Lester Tubbs presided in the absence of Clyde Jenken, president.

INDIA COMMITTEE PLACED IN PRISON

NEW DELHI, India, Aug. 27.—(UP)—The entire Indian congress working committee was arrested today as the government struck again at the leadership of the home rule government.

The congress committee, which covers the organization of the Mahatma Gandhi's independence campaign, was taken into custody here and held in jail.

There are in existence in the neighborhood of 450 different patterns of tires.

The Price Trend
There is no Better Indication of the trend of Commodity Prices than the present prices of Clothing
Take for instance Devonshire Suits. These are selling today with two pairs of pants for $35.00. The same suit in the same grade of fabric sold last year for $38.00 to $40.00—and two years ago for $38.00 to $40.00 WITH ONLY ONE PAIR OF PANTS.
Similar reductions in price are apparent in all lines connected with the clothing industry.

Yuma Wedding Is Revealed By Young People

A host of friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Poh jr., are today extending congratulations and good wishes, since they have learned of their romantic wedding which was an event of August 19 in Yuma, Ariz. Mrs. Poh was formerly Miss Alice Davenport, of this city, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reimie, while Mr. Poh is the son of a prominent Tustin family, Mr. and Mrs. William Poh sr.

The lovely Santa Ana girl made a charming bride in a graceful frock of green georgette fashioned modishly on long, flowing lines. There were no attendants at the wedding, which was one of quiet charm, and the Rev. W. S. Brown of the First Baptist church of Yuma officiated.

For the past two years Mrs. Poh has been employed in the office of Dr. W. F. Kistinger, and she plans to continue her work. Mr. Poh also is employed in this city. The young couple will be at home to their friends after September 1, and plan to establish their home at 607 East Walnut street.

TUSTIN PEOPLE ARE HOME FROM TRIP ABROAD

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sam W. Nau, of Prospect avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Boyer, of Tustin avenue, Tustin, are glad to welcome them home from their travels which took them across the Atlantic into the most interesting and historic spots of the continent of Europe and the British Isles.

The group left Tustin in March, going directly to New York and landing in Plymouth, England. There they were greatly impressed by standing on the key point where the Pilgrims first departed for America, and which is marked by a tablet, commemmorating their departure.

In Cathedral Towns

Five weeks were spent in and about London, and other towns of England, where the picturesque beauty of the cathedral towns was especially appealing to the travelers. A three weeks' tour of these towns was made by motor. Of the different cathedrals, it was thought that Durham cathedral was the most beautiful.

The automobile tour also included the rest of the British Isles. The home of Robert Burns, in Scotland was visited and in Ireland the Tustin people motored along the beautiful rugged coast of that country. Conditions of the peasants were very low, it was noticed in Ireland, with the poorer classes barely eking out an existence from their farms. Wales was also visited during the tour.

Attend Passion Play

The party enjoyed a smooth crossing of the channel by boat, and went directly to Paris, where they spent a week. From Paris, they traveled to Munich, one of the most beautiful cities in Germany, and the nearest approach to Oberammergau. At Oberammergau, they witnessed one of the greatest of all masterpieces, The Passion Play. The play was seen from a large enclosed amphitheater, seating 5000 people, which faced an open stage on the north. The setting beyond the proscenium arch is a natural one and the spectator views the hills beyond, the small hamlets and villages, and the cows grazing in the pastures. The parts in the play are taken by the people of the village, who live the simplest of lives, in preparing themselves to take their roles in the play.

Nurnberg was the next town visited and from there the travelers motored to Vienna, often called the "Paris of Eastern Europe." They found Vienna one of the most delightful of cities and one where art treasures were seen on every side.

Budapest, located on the banks of the Danube river, varied from the other cities visited, in that it is in reality two cities, under one government, and separated only by the river, the members of the group found. Buda, situated on the bluff side, contains the palace, and is perhaps the more beautiful of the two sections, while Pest, across the Danube, is the commercial side. Bridges connect the two.

Visit Dresden

Prague, in Czechoslovakia, was another interesting city included in the itinerary and from that place they went to Dresden, another art center, located on the Elbe river. The Dresden china factory, for which the city is noted, was also visited. It is located, not in the town, but in a small village, Meise, which is 20 miles from Dresden.

The travelers found that the charm of Europe lay not only in its architecture and works of art, but in its many rivers and lakes. They found the old customs existing practically only in the country, among the peasants, while in the cities, modern methods were employed and where American influence could be noted.

The verdue-clad Bavarian Alps, which were viewed along the way, especially impressed the group, as they went to Berlin from Dresden. They found that most of the old royal palaces, formerly occupied by the ex-kaiser are now being converted into art museums. In Berlin, they rode down Unter den Linden, or avenue of the lindens, which is famous the world over.

Stockholm, another curious and beautiful city, was next visited. The Swedish city is built upon seven islands, all beautifully wooded, which are connected by bridges. The city is rapidly growing, and very picturesque. Sweden was toured by rail, until the party reached Lodingen, where they took a coast mail steamer for North Cape. The steamer stopped at all of the small fishing villages, giving the travelers an intimate glimpse of rural life. The small ports of Sweden, nestled at the foot of forested hills, reminded the travelers much of Oregon, they state.

At North Cape, the group landed, and climbed the cape, which is a sheer cliff 1000 feet in height, with a narrow zig zig path up the side. They were privileged to see the midnight sun for six successive nights. A brief visit was made in Russian Finland before stopping in Copenhagen, which was the home of Thorvaldsen, master sculptor. One of the greatest of his works, Christ and the Twelve Apostles, was viewed by the group. The reverence with which heroes are regarded is an especially vivid impression of the returned travelers. The many monuments and statues which are erected to them was noted in every country visited.

Among treasures, the group has many samples of hand woven scarfs and linens, and exquisite etchings and reproductions of works of art that interested them most.

Treble Clef Club Enjoy Picnic

A delightful pot-luck dinner at Irvine park last evening, served as a pleasing conclusion to the summer months which members of the Treble Clef club have so much enjoyed, and also as an introduction to the approaching season of rehearsals which is to begin September 8. About 40 members were present to share in the pleasures of last evening.

Tables made an especially lovely appearance, decked with huge dahlias in the most striking shades, artistically combined with ferns. Arrangements for details of the affair were in charge of Mrs. F. E. Dearth and Mrs. R. P. Goulden.

The locks on the North Sea Canal at Ymuiden are 1312 feet long and 164 feet wide. These are considered the largest in the world.

Lovely Wedding In Whittier Yesterday Is of Interest Here

Numbering among Orange County's college graduates are a host of Berkeley students who will be interested in learning of the wedding of their school-day associates, Miss Frances Rogers, charming daughter of Mayor and Mrs. W. O. Rogers, of Whittier, and B. Clyde Taylor, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Taylor, of Los Angeles. The lovely Rogers home in Whittier, decked with a glorious array of late summer flowers and ferns provided the setting for the affair, an event of yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. The Rev. E. E. Day, of that city, officiated.

The bride made a beautiful picture as she entered the room dressed in a creamy net frock fashioned with fitted bodice and long, full skirt. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lily of the valley. Preceding the couple's entrance, Mrs. E. E. Day played Schubert's "Serenade," following with Lohengrin's wedding march.

Following the ceremony, an informal reception was held, with the bride cutting an elaborately decorated wedding cake. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor then left immediately for Alhambra, escorted by relatives and friends, and from there went by airplane to San Francisco. The bride chose a smart little brown ensemble with harmonizing accessories for her going away outfit. The young people will leave San Francisco Friday on the "President Taft" for Cagayan, Mindanao, Philippine islands, where they will make their home for three years. Mr. Taylor will be employed there with the California Packing Corporation, superintending the culture of pineapples, as the company is developing 50,000 acres of this fruit there. For the past year and a half, Mr. Taylor has been affiliated with the same company and stationed at Honolulu.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are graduates of the University of California at Berkeley, where Mrs. Taylor received her Masters' Degree and Mr. Taylor specialized in agriculture.

Relatives of the bridegroom, Mrs. Jo Marshall and Charles L. Barkdull, of 1242 South Ross street, this city, were present at the wedding, and expect to be in San Francisco Friday, together with other relatives and friends to bid Mr. and Mrs. Taylor bon voyage on their long journey.

Pupils and Teachers Share Delightful Reunion Recently

A reunion of former friends and classmates in the Westminster school more than 22 years ago and their meeting with two former teachers was the delightful affair brought about by Mrs. May Folger, one of the group, who entertained at her home Monday afternoon honoring Mrs. Doris Rodocker Peterson and her young daughter, Miss Evangeline Peterson, who are visiting in Westminster from Denver, Colorado.

Mrs. Peterson and daughter, who have been in Los Angeles with relatives, came Sunday to the Folger home to remain until Tuesday, and the last of the week she expects to return to Denver. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rodocker, resided here about 20 years ago and now live about 200 miles from Denver, where they are located on a ranch.

Old friends of the family were invited guests at the reunion and included in the group were six girls, Miss Fay Weinschenk, Mrs. Laura Morrill Smith, Mrs. Henrietta Dickey Cowgill, Mrs. May Folger and Mrs. Peterson, who entered the first grade of the school together. The group was photographed with their first grade teacher, Mrs. Mable Dickey McCoy. The same group later were taught by Thomas Hosack who with Mrs. Hosack were also of the guests of the afternoon who enjoyed recalling happy days spent together.

PROSPERITY IS PREDICTED FOR OCTOBER FIRST

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(UP) — "Good times" will return to America in October, bankers of the country voted, 2 to 1, in a poll analyzed in the forthcoming issue of American magazine by Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of the department of commerce.

The remaining one-third of the bankers polled, put the date no later than January 1. All predicted a healthier condition than that which preceded the 1929 debacle.

"The climb will be healthier than that after any previous depression," Klein declares. "The condition of 1929 was hysterical. We are heading toward an earned prosperity rather than an hysterical one. We will arrive at the brass tacks era rather than another brass band age."

Klein points out that 11 depressions in the past 40 years were, on the average, of about 13 months duration. In no case, he adds, have these depressions, especially that of 1929, covered areas on the business map as have those of 1907 and 1921.

Outright stockholders in the six major corporations of the United States have increased by nearly 200,000 since the market crash, Klein says. Business and investors are more closely knit by improved transportation and communication. The country profits by improvement in a similar one, he adds.

"Foreign trade," says the assistant secretary, "will grow with the stabilization of foreign buying power, because Europe still buys half it needs from America. We will have a far more substantial economic body for passing of the cream-puff age in business."

U. S. COLONIAL PERIOD TOPIC OF PROFESSOR

BOSTON, Aug .27.—(INS)—In comparing social and economic conditions of colonial times in Europe with what is being experienced by America today Professor Robert E. Moody, in opening the Tercentenary course on "History and Literature of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, at Boston University's Summer session, declared that contributing causes are so entirely different, that it is difficult to judge.

"With the rural population of England rapidly moving to the cities, due primarily to the inclosure laws, a temporary surplus of labor was involved in the Colonial period," declared the Boston University professor. "Like the big business mergers of today in modern industry and finance, which are creating a surplus of trained men in many fields, the passing of the inclosure laws threw many sheep tenders out of work. Where seven or eight men had been needed before to care for the sheep, one man, with the aid of the new fences, could do the task well.

There was little social legislature then in England to remedy the poor conditions of living," continued Professor Moody. "Consequently many of the people saw in the new world a chance to get away from unfavorable conditions. England did not want law-breakers and like offenders in the country, and unable to cope with them adequately, she sympathized with their efforts to leave. Consequently, many who came over within the Colonial period were vagrants and potential criminals. This was not so with the first settlement that had its roots in the Reformation movement."

A large interest is being shown in the Tercentenary course. A preceding lecture is given each Friday before each excursion to the numerous historic spots throughout the state. Lectures and readings on literature and history of the Massachusetts Bay Colony are given by Profs. Thomas B. Mather, Winslow H. Loveland, Ralph W. Taylor, and Robert E. Moody.

MODERN SOCRATES

LONDON, Aug. 27.—When Serge Vasilanko was sentenced to death in Estonia, a republic on the Gulf of Finland, he was given his choice of dying by hanging or poison. He chose the latter. He took a big dose of poison and suffered for three weeks without dying. He finally recovered and the government wanted him again to take his choice. But he claimed that he had taken his chance of death and that it was not willed that he should die, so he refused both the noose and poison.

Two Headed Trout Lives for Months

MT. SHASTA CITY, Calif., Aug. 27—(INS)—A two-headed Loch Leven trout, now 16 months old, is one of the most interesting freaks at the world's largest fish hatchery here.

The freak feeds by both heads, but it's actions are guided by the right head. For many months both heads grew about the same, but lately the right head is increasing in size. Attendants believe that the fish will die when the weak head no longer is able to serve the body.

Two-headed trout are not uncommon, as are other freaks among the millions of fish spawned here, but Captain H. C. Lambson, superintendent of the hatchery, says that this is the first time in his experience that such a freak has lived more than 45 days.

The tomato has taken its place beside the orange as a source of necessary vitamins in diet.

Raw Fish Cocktail Something New

A raw fish cocktail is the latest serving wrinkle if you want to know what's new. But the term "raw fish" is a mosnomer, for the action of the fruit acid when combined with the fish, cooks it. But here is how it is done—

Use some kind of white meated fish—halibut, sole, or some fish similar. Free from skin, membrane and bones. Cut into tiny dice and squeeze over the raw fish a sufficient quantity of fresh lime juice to have part of the fish in the juice.

Put on ice for two hours, and turn the fish a few times so that it has a chance to season evenly. Dress the fish flakes with cocktail sauce well seasoned, and serve it icy-cold.

The action of the acid lime juice on the albuminous part of the fish cooks it exactly as the white of an egg is coddled when left to stand some time in medium hot water. From the standpoint of vitamin supply this cocktail has much to commend it.

TODAY'S RECIPE

LEMON COFFEE LOAF

1 yeast cake dissolved in
2-3 cup tepid milk
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup pastry flour
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 egg, well beaten
Grated rind of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons shredded candied lemon peel
Flour to make stiff sponge

Take the first five ingredients and whip into a smooth sponge. This can be done the night before or right after breakfast. Twelve to fifteen hours are required to raise the dough and bake the loaf.

After the sponge is very light whip it down and add the melted butter, egg, grated lemon peel and a few chopped pecan meats if wished. Add sufficient flour to make a stiff dough, turn onto the board and knead well. Keep the dough as soft in texture as possible—too much flour used in these breads produce a heavy loaf.

After kneading the dough let it rise again, cut it down, work the shredded peel into it, form into a loaf and let it rise until very light. Bake in a hot oven ten minutes, then reduce the heat and finish baking.

Take part of the raised sponge and to it add a beaten egg, a little more sugar and 4 tablespoons of melted butter. Thicken to soft dough, knead well, then take small pieces, roll them into strips the thickness of a pencil, arrange in a mat on a buttered pan, brush over with milk and sugar and cover until very light. Bake in a quick oven and just before taking from the oven put a spoonful of jam in the center of each butter horn, or brush lightly with sugar frosting after taking from the oven.

A slice of Lemon loaf has a calory value of 150.

If you want something extra good, just send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and get a copy of this recipe. In case you are not familiar with spoon bread let me tell you that it is a very soft corn bread served from the dish in which it is baked. It goes wonderfully with fried chicken or with little sausages.

NO WOMAN LEAD IN 'THE DAWN PATROL'

For the first time in his long and brilliant career Richard Barthelmess, First National-Vitaphone star, appears minus a leading lady. This occurs in "The Dawn Patrol" which is now playing at the Fox Broadway theater. "The Dawn Patrol" has been heralded as the Beau Geste of the air service and that gives a clew as to why the star of "Son of the Gods" has no leading lady. "The Dawn Patrol" story concerns itself in a highly dramatic manner with the friendships of men and boys who are daily facing death in the R. F. C. Barthelmess is said to have one of the most vital and intense roles of his career as Captain Courtney, commander of the squadron, who hates his job because he must command "schoolboys" to fly antiquated planes against the more modern equipment of the Germans. Among the chief supporting roles are Douglas Fairbanks jr., Neil Hamilton, Gardner James and others. Howard Hawks directed this version of the John Monk Saunders story.

SHELLEY HOUSE TO SHOW 'PICCADILLY'

Quite an optical treat is offered Santa Ana theatergoers, tonight, at Shelley's Third and Rush street theater.

The feature picture, tonight, tomorrow night and Friday night, is none other than, "Piccadilly" and the star of the picture is none other than the world renowned dancer and actress, Gilda Gray, supported by an all-star cast.

"Piccadilly," which was actually filmed in London and vicinity, tells a very dramatic and, to say the least, gripping story of life, love and strife as it exists in London's slums and Limehouse district.

Also on the bill is a comedy, a serial, a news reel and a cartoon, and tonight at 8:30 a diamond ring is to be given away.

GIRL BREAKS RECORD

WINNIPEG, Aug. 27.—An English girl, Katherine Trevelyan, broke the record for climbing Mount Cavel, near Jasper, Alberta, this year. She is the first this season to reach the summit, a distance of more than 11,000 feet. Once on the way up she fell over a cliff and was only saved by the actions of her guide, who grabbed her anchor rope.

'ANYBODY'S WOMAN' CLOSES HERE TODAY

"Anybody's Woman," Paramount production starring Ruth Chatterton in probably her greatest role since "Madam X," which has been showing at the Fox West Coast theater since Monday, closes its run there tonight. The picture has proved particularly popular since its Santa Ana run opened.

It is the story of a chorus girl who marries a well to do lawyer, while he is drunk. He wakes up the next morning to deeply regret his experience, but who allows her to stay.

How she wins his love and even makes him fight to hold her in the end is the backbone of the story, but her acting opposite Clive Brook is the outstanding thing about the picture. Her admirers here will like her in this picture even better than they did in "Sarah and Son."

Clive Brook's part is just as outstanding. He shares honors with her throughout the film, Paul Lukas also has an important role in the picture.

A Fox Movietone newsreel, together with an all-talking comedy and other short subjects also are on the program.

WIDOW OF SOLDIER BOBS HAIR AT 103

LUND, Sweden, Aug. 27.—(UP)—A hundred and three year old flapper with bobbed hair is "Mother" Karna Alm, the widow of a Swedish soldier, who is enjoying her life fully at the Veberod home for the aged, near Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's ancestral home.

In spite of her years she keeps abreast with the styles of the times and recently had her silvery tresses shorn and smartly bobbed.

She can read without glasses, her hearing is unimpaired and she enjoys her daily walk.

Her memory also serves her well and she likes to sing the old love songs of the days when her late husband courted her.

"Mother" Karna refuses to consider 103 as an advanced age and expects to live for many more years.

HAINES STARRING AT WALKER TODAY

William Haines, as a hard boiled gob, washing out clothes on the deck of a dreadnaught, making faces behind the backs of "noncoms," or coming out of a free-for-all unscathed, between the legs of bruised and beaten colleagues, will not surprise his admirers who have long been accustomed to seeing him do just that sort of thing.

However, in "Navy Blues," his first all-talking vehicle, which is now showing at Walker's State theater, he will probably surprise a good many people, for in this picture he not only gives his usual light hearted, fun loving impersonations, in this instance of one of Uncle Sam's sailors, but he also goes "dramatic," something which he has wanted to do for some time.

Whether because of a fear of going stale in playing the continual clown or merely because of a legitimate desire to show the world that he can do something other than make people laugh, William Haines is given an opportunity in "Navy Blues" to do some acting which will be found to be on a par with any done by screen stars who have built up a reputation on their ability to put over an emotional scene.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

The basket man was very kind. He told the bunch he didn't mind if they looked o'er his baskets. "My, they're dandies," Clowny cried. "I'll bet you sell a lot each day as you are traveling on your way. And that must make the donkey glad, to get them off his hide."

"Well, boys, I make them all myself and pile them high upon a shelf, and then I load the donkey down and on our way we go. Folks buy the baskets that I bring and they are used for everything. It seems I loaf along because the donkey walks so slow."

And then the man went on his way and left the Tinymites to play. They found a restaurant nearby and had a bite to eat. When it was dessert time they got some tasty cake and ate a lot. The Travel Man said, "Say, don't stuff. That cake is pretty sweet."

Out on the highway once again the Tinymites all listened when they heard a real loud tooting. "That's a bugle call," cried one. "That sort of music makes a hit with me. Let's find who's blowing it. Perhaps he'll let us blow it, too, and we'll have heaps of fun."

They very shortly met a band of young boys who looked very grand, dressed up in clever uniforms. Said Carpy, "Who are you?" "We're Boy Scouts," one lad told the crowd. "Of course that makes us all feel proud. You've surely heard of Boy Scouts. Maybe you are Boy Scouts, too."

And then they heard wee Coppy shout, "I'm too small yet to be a Scout, but Scouty is a Scout and that's why Scouty is his name." Their new found friend cried, "Well, that's fine." And then they all stood in a line and shook hands with the Tinies, saying, "We are glad you came."

Missing Letter Links

RULES:

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to PIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE-TIE-PIE-PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters cannot be changed.

Pitched the First No-Hit Game

Cy Young . . . stocky little pitcher for the Boston Americans . . . pitched a perfect game May 5, 1904.

Here's a story that every genuine baseball bug will want to clip and paste in his scrap book . . . How George Washington Bradley, now a Philadelphia policeman, established pitching records that have stood since 1876

By JAMES W. BOOTH

Bradley . . . doesn't look anything like his 74 years. . . . He is still on active duty with the Philadelphia police . . . as a guard at City Hall.

TO the younger generation of baseball fans the name of George Washington Bradley may not be familiar. When you think of the great stars of the past your mind naturally reverts to A. G. Spaulding, Pop Anson, Wee Willie Keeler, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson, Big Ed Walsh, Chief Bender and similar bright lights of the diamond who helped to make baseball the great game that it is.

The odds are you will not include Bradley. Yet he is one of the unsung heroes of the national pastime, for back in the days when baseball was in its infancy—the first year of the National League—he hung up a set of records which have yet to be shattered.

On July 15, 1876, a little over 54 years ago, Bradley, pitching for St. Louis, held Hartford to no hits and no runs. It was the first no-hit game in the National League.

"That's right," Bradley told me recently. "I pitched the first no-hit game in the National League."

There was no egotism in his voice, not even the semblance of pride. It was a simple, matter-of-fact statement.

That first no-hit game was more than just a no-hit game—not a Hartford batter reached first base. While more than a half century has passed since Bradley turned in that perfect game, but five players since then have accomplished the feat.

JOHN M. WARD of the old Providence Grays and J. Lee Richmond of the Worcester Nationals turned the trick back in 1880; Cy Young of the Boston Americans came through with a perfect game on May 5, 1904; Addie Joss of the Cleveland Indians did it on October 2 four years later, and Charlie Robertson of the Chicago White Sox on April 30, 1922.

In those early days of the National League games were not played every day, as is the custom now. Instead, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday were the playing days. Three games constituted a series.

In the series with Hartford in July, 1876, Bradley, to use the slang expression, was "the whole works." He pitched all three games, shutting out Hartford for 27 innings, and thereby accomplishing an "iron man" stunt that has not been equaled in either the National or American leagues.

On July 11 Bradley held Hartford to four hits and no runs. He licked them on July 13, holding them down to five safe blows and no runs. Then, on the 15th, he pitched his perfect game.

That record has been approached, but never equaled.

WALTER JOHNSON of the Washington Senators approached it when he shut out the New York Yankees, September 4, 5 and 7, 1908. Johnson pitched 27 consecutive innings against the same club, but the Yankees got hits in every game.

Cy Young, that famous pitcher of yesteryear, pitched 22 consecutive years in the major leagues. He turned in three no-hit games. Forty-five consecutive innings without a run being scored by opponents was credited to Young. But he was not facing the same team in all the games and had a fair rest between the five contests.

Bradley is now a Philadelphia policeman. He has been a member of the Quaker City force since he gave up playing baseball 'way back in the 1880's. Although too old for active service, he still remains on the force. He is one of the police guards on duty at City Hall, his duties consisting chiefly of keeping ambulance chasers, political hangers-on and similar small fry, the like of which are to be found congregated in the corridors of every city hall, on the move.

To look at Bradley one would never imagine that he is nearing 75. True, his hair is snow-white, but his eyes are clear and sparkling, his complexion ruddy, his carriage is as straight as an Indian's, and he walks with the snap of a soldier.

When I talked with him he would not admit anything remarkable in the fact that he was the first man to pitch a perfect no-hit game.

"I FIRST played professional baseball in 1874," Bradley said. "I went up to Easton, Pa., and joined the team there, playing first base. We weren't in any league, but we played all the big league teams—the Atlantics of Brooklyn, the Mutuals of New York, the Red Stockings of Cincinnati, and the rest of them. And we beat the majority of them, too.

"The present National League had not been organized then. The league they had in those days was known as the National Association of Baseball Players, but it was on its last legs, in its last year, in fact.

"The Boston team was the whole show in those days.

"That summer William H. Hulbert came on from Chicago and got A. G. Spaulding and some of the other star players of the Boston team to sign contracts to play with Chicago the following year. That raised an awful rumpus. The rule of the association was that no player could sign with another team until the end of the current playing season. The National Association threatened to blacklist them.

"As a result, Hulbert, with the backing of the western clubs, succeeded in organizing the National League the following winter. Hulbert was a Chicago business man, who had always been interested in baseball, and when he organized the new league a general house-cleaning of the game started. Before then the gamblers had a grip on the game and it was very crooked.

"It was a tough proposition in the old days to keep the players from reach of the allurements of gamblers. At every important game a swarm of gamblers carried on their operations without the slightest concealment. They would often carry with them satchels filled with one, two, five and 10-dollar bills and make their bets while flourishing a lot of greenbacks in their hands at every stage of the play—betting on base hits, on innings and on the final result.

"In the course of time the players became badly corrupted by the gamblers, and the public was so disgusted that it looked as though the sport, as a professional one, at least, would go to pieces.

"I started pitching up there in Easton and when Hulbert organized the National League I had an offer to pitch for St. Louis and accepted.

"I remember distinctly one of the first games I pitched out there. It was against Boston and I won it. It gave me a good bit of a thrill, for Boston had won 25 straight games and had just come from Chicago after cleaning up the series with Spaulding's team."

Baseball records show that in this game against Boston Bradley allowed but one hit. The score was 5-0.

BRADLEY played with St. Louis for two years. Of the game which brought him his fame—the no-hit game—he had little to say.

"In 1877," he declared, turning the conversation away from the no-hit game, "I went to Chicago. We won the championship that year. Spaulding and I carried most of the pitching burden, and if I do say it myself we did a darn good job of it, too.

"Speaking of Spaulding, there was a fine man. There was never a finer one. And how he loved baseball! It was his religion. But above all things he wanted it on the square. He didn't want crookedness or gambling attached to it, and it was largely through his efforts that the game is what it is today."

Bradley paused a moment or two, and then asked me,

"Can you imagine a baseball player too proud to receive a salary?"

"Well," he asserted, continuing before I had an opportunity to reply, "when Spaulding first began playing the game, he was. I remember him telling me how it embarrassed him to receive $40 a week for pitching. That was before I started in the game. He had been pitching smack-up ball for the Forest City club of Rockford, Ill., in 1866 and fans used to come over from Chicago in droves.

"Spaulding was then a grocer's clerk and every time he stayed away from his job to play ball his salary was docked. Then one day a man came over from Chicago and offered Spaulding a position at $40 a week with all the time off he wanted to play baseball. This was beating around the bush, of course, but it was the recognized way.

"Had he openly taken money as a ball player he would have been regarded as a despised professional. And, at that stage of the game's history, professionalism was a charge like murder.

"Pop Anson captained the Chicago team I played on. ANSON was just beginning to attract attention, a ball player if there ever was one. Of course, he had won a lot of fame for himself while playing with Rockford, the same team that Spaulding started with, but it wasn't until with Chicago that he reached the heights.

"Besides being a great captain, he was one of the most scientific hitters that ever played baseball. He had brains in his bat.

"Anson's immortality in baseball, however, rests on the work he did with the Chicago team of 1882, five years after I left the club. It was then that he practically instituted inside baseball, or team plays. Infield and outfield, with Anson, became a part of the science of baseball. Through him modern batting came.

"Beginning with Anson and his team, one can follow the development of team play through the St. Louis Browns under Charley Comiskey's inspiration, through Hanlon's Baltimore team of 1890-94, and Frank Chance's Chicago Cubs."

Bradley left the Cubs after two years, and later joined the Providence Grays club of the National League.

"Charlie Radbourne," he recalls, speaking of the man with whom he shared the pitching duties while with the Grays, "was not only a phenomenal pitcher, but one of the greatest all-around players the game ever produced.

"He shone with quite as much brilliance as Spaulding, until consumption cut short his career about 38 years ago. Several years after I was with Providence, Charlie Sweeney, who was sharing the pitching duties with Radbourne at the time, jumped from organized baseball to the outlaws, and only Radbourne was left for the slab work.

"But that didn't bother Radbourne, for he not only jumped right in and did all the pitching, but he made a new world's record by winning 18 straight games and the championship for Providence. This gameness cost Radbourne his life, for his health broke under the strain, which was generally credited with having caused his consumption.

"BILLY SUNDAY was another great player in his day and many people have said that he was the equal of Ty Cobb. Billy was a good player all right, and the greatest base runner I have ever seen, but I believe he lacked the rare judgment that Cobb had, and which made him just about the greatest player the game ever produced.

"Another great player was King Kelly. He was a great catcher and a great right fielder, a wonder hitter and one of the headiest men I've seen on the diamond."

"What about salaries in those early days?" I asked Bradley.

"As a rule they were small," he replied. "They ranged anywhere from $600 to $1,200 for a season, and $1200 was considered big money. The ball teams in those days were supported chiefly by individual citizens.

"Speaking of salaries and what the different clubs spent on baseball, recalls the hubbub there was in 1885 when the Chicago club sold Mike Kelly to Boston for $10,000. The price created a sensation; the public was aghast.

"Kelly was a peculiar type. He always sought out the weak spots in the game not protected by the rules. There is an old story about him to the effect that as captain of the team the rules entitled him to take any player's position at a moment's notice. A man at bat knocked a foul toward third and over the third baseman's head toward the bench where Kelly sat.

"'You're out of the game,' Kelly yelled to his fielder. 'I'm in your place,' and caught the ball.

HOW many fans realize what a big part the change in the pitching rules since the early days of baseball has played in developing the skilled pitchers of this generation? The pitcher today has seven chances with a batter—four balls and three strikes, barring foul balls, of course. A half century ago he had 12 chances—nine balls and three strikes. In the early days the underhand pitch was the thing.

"Originally," Bradley says, "the rule was that a pitcher had to keep the ball below his hip in delivering it and, of course, this naturally compelled him to deliver the underhand throw. Along about 1882, however, with the advent of the American Association, the rules were changed and the pitcher was permitted to raise his arm as high as his shoulder in delivering the ball. That was a direct step forward. Finally, about 1890, the rules were changed again and no restrictions whatever were placed on the height at which the pitcher might deliver the ball.

"So you see it wasn't any physical weakness or lack of skill, but the rules of the game, that prevented the development back in those early days of baseball of such remarkable speed artists as Rube Waddell and Walter Johnson."

Bradley is an ardent baseball fan, and almost every day when the Athletics are at home you will find him out urging his old friend, Connie Mack, on to another pennant.

Charlie Robertson . . . stepped into fame as a rookie . . . by pitching a no-hit game for the Chicago White Sox, April 30, 1922.

Addie Joss . . . still spoken of in a whisper out Cleveland-way . . . joined the immortals Oct. 2, 1908 . . . with another perfect game.

George Washington Bradley . . . sketched from an old photograph to show how he looked when he won his baseball immortality back in the days of Anson, Sunday, Radbourne and Kelly . . . pitched three consecutive shutouts, the third game being the first no-hit pitching feat recorded.

FINANCIAL AND MARKET NEWS

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(UP)—A combination of profit taking and bear attacks brought irregularity into the stock market today after the general list had advanced under leadership of U. S. Steel.

Many stocks retained fair sized gains to the close, but others were driven down. Steel Common made a new high on the movement at 172¼ in the early dealings, slumped off to 170½. Near the close it was rallying again, helping most of the market to close above lows of the day.

CHICAGO BD. OF TRADE

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP)—Breaking in the latter part of the session, on the Board of Trade today, wheat sank to new lows for the day with March at a new low for the season. The market was heavy throughout the session and with Winnipeg selling off sharply, October there hitting a new low on the crop, selling became general nad stop loss orders were caught. Buying against bids checked the decline. Corn sank with wheat after having een decidedly strong early and aided in sustaining wheat prices during the forepart of the session. Oats trailed corn closely.

At the close wheat was 1⅜ to 1½c lower, corn was ½ to 1½c lower and oats were 1⅜ to 1⅝c lower. Provisions were unevenly steady.

EVENING SALUTATION

"For ages now men have cried out for leisure. One of these days the impatient gods will punish men by giving it to them."
—SHERWOOD ANDERSON.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION

Mayor Rolph, of San Francisco, is the candidate on the Republican ticket for governor of the state of California. This nomination is no surprise to most people who were following the situation. The split in the prohibition and law enforcement forces of Southern California was bound to give the vote to Rolph, in the opinion of both the Fitts and Young leaders, and it was simply a question of which was the stronger.

The state Anti-Saloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the institutions to which the forces always look for leadership, came out early in the campaign and declared that the stronger of the two candidates, in their judgment, was C. C. Young, and they requested the support of Mr. Young. Rebellion broke out over this pronouncement, and apparently the request aroused the followers of Fitts to a greater zeal on behalf of their candidate.

The campaign for Fitts in Los Angeles and Orange county took on very largely the character of a holy crusade, and the tremendous landslide in these two counties to Fitts over Young was expected by those who had been closely watching the events of the immediate previous period. And yet out of it emerges Governor Young as the second man on the ticket, with Mr. Rolph first.

Mr. Fitts, outside of Los Angeles and Orange counties did not receive a very large vote, and in many places his vote was negligible. The issue of supporting a Southern governor had great effect in the closing days of the campaign. This appealed to sectional prejudice, we believe, unwise as well as unfair. But in any case, a "wet" candidate, the Mayor of San Francisco, a Northern man is the candidate on the Republican ticket for governor of the state, and he is confronted by Milton K. Young, of Los Angeles, the Democrat. Ordinarily, a nomination on the Republican ticket means an election. The vote for Governor Young, combined with the vote of Mr. Fitts, according to present returns, shows the two in a majority over Rolph by 150,000. This nomination is a great blow to the Hoover administration and to the most important issue in the county.

Orange county had some upsets. The election of W. T. Lambert to the auditorship over the present incumbent, William C. Jerome, came as a great surprise to many people, and yet the sentiment of the county as currently reported, was quite completely expressed in that vote. There was a disposition to put a new group in control of the political life of Orange county, and Mr. Lambert who has an amiable, winning, capable personality, conducted such a campaign as to win the confidence and votes of the people of the country.

Mr. Joplin, the present treasurer, fell by the wayside, in part owing to the same sentiment. The run-off for this office will be between Earl Abbey and E. B. Trago.

James Sleeper, the assessor, is the only man in the courthouse upon whom a serious fight was made who came through as an elected man. The character and ability of the man, and the viciousness of his opposition rather insured this. The men who were back of the campaign against the present assessor can certainly take no satisfaction out of the result. The people rebuked them to the measure of their power practically everywhere and except in the very center of this opposition itself in Anaheim, the vote for assessor evidenced the confidence of the people.

The vote on the office of district attorney was no surprise to us. We knew that the political organization of the county was out in force, solidly behind Sam Collins. At the same time the opposition, and those who were desirous of seeing a candidate who openly espoused independent action and the "dry" cause, were handicapped by the inability to come out pronouncedly for one candidate without being unfair to another who might have equal claim. In the coming contest the elements back of the "dry" and law enforcement groups will not be so handicapped.

Two of the candidates, Mr. Haynes and Mr. Westover, had received the endorsement of the Law Enforcement league, and we had not thought it fair to come out for one as against the other. At the same time, David Wettlin had also answered the letter, and was making his campaign to a very considerable extent on the same issues as were Westover and Haynes. The vote for Mr. Westover was an expression by the people of confidence in a man who has no entanglements that will prevent him from carrying on the duties of his office for the people's interest.

To some extent, the same condition prevailed in the sheriff's race as did in the district attorney's race. Two candidates, Mr. Jackson and Mr. Pearson, from the standpoint of law enforcement, were equally satisfactory, and The Register had not felt it wise or just to take a position between them. The large vote for Logan Jackson suggests to all the possibility, if not the probability of his election.

The election of Ray Adkinson as superintendent of schools is a personal compliment to his ability and personality. His former students were with him to a man, and they unquestionably had great influence with their parents. We have no doubt but what many parents were asked for the first time in their lives to vote for a candidate by their sons and daughters in the request made to vote for Mr. Adkinson.

There was really no issue in the campaign between the two candidates for tax collector. We expressed ourselves favorable to Mrs. Spangler because we felt it was only fair to the women, and fair to one who had given of her time and energy and means to every good cause, and done it as unstintingly as she has done. With nearly all the other offices held by men, it would have been fine if a woman could have been elected to this one. But a real campaign was not conducted on her behalf, except by herself and her Parent-Teachers' Association friends. During the last week of the campaign one or two of the papers came out on her behalf. If a real campaign had been conducted, it would have undoubtedly changed the result.

The surveyor and coroner were re-elected, and few looked for any other result.

There was little campaigning done in the supervisorial fights except in the fifth district. There Stuart Lucas conducted a real open fight, together with several other candidates opposed to the present incumbent, and Mr. Lucas heads the ticket for the run-off, with the present incumbent, Mr. Jeffrey, in second place. In the sense that there was a campaign in the fifth district, there was really no campaign in the second and fourth districts. An opportunity was given to vote, and a substantial vote was given the opposition candidates, but the two present incumbents had no difficulty in their re-election.

For constable of Santa Ana township, the four high men were Jesse Elliott, Cornish Roehm, Vernon Barnhill and Joseph Ryan. Jesse Elliott, who received the most votes among the six candidates, did not receive quite enough to be elected in the primaries.

We wish to congratulate the men who were elected in the primaries yesterday to their official positions. A great responsibility is theirs. Orange county is growing in population and wealth. It will grow in the next four years. We desire to say that regardless of differences in opinions, we will co-operate as far as is possible in all plans for bigger development.

At the close of this primary campaign we look back upon the weeks with satisfaction. We know of nothing we have said or done in respect to it that we have not done in the best spirit possible, and we certainly have said nothing which we feel we would not repeat again if we passed through the same circumstances. As a rule, we believe the character of campaign conducted by all the candidates has been very creditable. While we feel it is unfortunate that men for the board of supervisors are elected by districts rather than by the county as a whole, yet as long as that condition exists, we must acquiesce as men in a democracy to what the smaller group in any district determines upon.

Disappointments are bound to come to candidates and to people who support them, but it is fine at the conclusion of a contest, to have the satisfaction of feeling that what was done was honorably done and that there are no regrets either in victory or defeat. The Register naturally feels grateful that it has found such a vast number of citizens who agree with the principles for which it has been standing.

AN ARTIST PASSES

The passing of Lon Chaney, apparently at the height of his career, is a great loss. The story of his life as it is revealed more completely in the notices of his death than was sought by him in life, proves that Lon Chaney deserved the admiration of the public for his personal conduct and progress toward fame, as well as for his art. He was born in Colorado Springs in 1883, the son of parents who were both deaf mutes. As a property boy in the opera house of Colorado Springs he taught himself by observation.

Success came to the artist in "The Miracle Man," "The Penalty," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Phantom of the Opera," "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Road to Mandalay," "Tell It To The Marines," "Mr. Wu," "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," and "The Unholy Three." Lon Chaney long held himself aloof from the "talkies" and the recent production of "The Unholy Three" as a "talkie" which met with popular approval, seemed to be the dawn of finer and more complete productions in which he would star.

He has left the world of mortals but there remain indelible impressions of his pantomimes. Thrills of revulsion and horror, which his portrayals of deformed and anti-social individuals inspired, are commingled with the lesson he impressed through many of these characters: that there is much good in the worst of us—and often where it is most concealed.

Where Are the Wallflowers?

New York Times

It is too much to expect that any intelligent person over 30 should have the point of view of a college boy or a debutante. Nor can the young business man or woman see the world just as it appears to children in high school. But the individual who left school behind several years ago should still be capable of observing how the youngsters look at life and each other.

A curious mixture of the outlook of two generations is found in an article in the September Harper's by Brenda Ueland. She recalls the horrors experienced by young girls who were not popular at dancing classes or parties, and says with truth that many women now are handicapped socially because they were once wall-flowers. Because girls were taught to try to charm somebody, to conceal their preferences and to be both modest and coy, she believes that every grown woman today has known the pangs of the wallflower complex.

It is not easy to disprove that statement, though every one can think of women who never gave evidence of that early experience; but when the writer says that the girls of today are suffering from the same disfiguring social education, it is hard for any one who sees many youngsters to believe it. The little girls, almost always a trifle more mature and composed for their years than the boys, do not seem to need encouragement. There is no pretense about them, and at the rate they are going it will not be long before the boys will need protection from a wallflower complex.

Gracious! Has It Come to the Point Where the Boys Are Afraid to Come Near the Place Any More?

More Truth Than Poetry

STILL THE RECORD HOLDER

One Simeon Stylites
Who lived some years B. C.—
There being then, on moor or fen
No semblance of a tree,—
And having made his mind up
That he'd be widely known
And win wild cheers, sat thirty years
Upon a pole of stone.

For thirty years the people
Who dwelt near Antioch
In much surprise would lift their eyes
To that slim spire of rock,
And when their startled vision
Those placid features met,
They said "Well well! Don't that beat all?
Old Sim is up there yet!"

Eftsoons throughout the region
A host of ardent souls
Who hoped to claim a meed of fame
Were perched on marble poles.
But lacking in endurance
They soon would fail and fall;
As all men know the records show
That Sim out sat them all.

Moral:

Folks may become immortal
By sitting in a tree,
As that stout kid Stylites did
So many years B. C.,
But they will not be by-words
In anybody's ears
Unless they sit' and do not suit
For MORE than thirty years.

Today Should Be a World Holiday

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

There are those who would have us abolish all national holidays because in their view nationalism is too narrow. They maintain that national holidays deepen devotion to country at the expense of the larger devotion to humanity.

There are others who seek to abolish religious holidays. They would have us cherish the aspirations which draw men of all faiths together, rather than the differences which keep men apart.

Most of us believe, however, that devotion to country and to church do not necessarily prevent larger enthusiasms. We would not aboilsh what holidays we have, but liberalize them.

We would go a large step further. We would establish a World Holiday. Unhappily, not one of the hundreds of holidays which are now celebrated the world over can ever become a World Holiday. Most of them are as little suited to the purpose as the Fourth of July. Even Christmas would not do for three-fourths of the world's population. In the past, no day has given the peoples of all nations common cause for rejoicing.

Now there is such a day—August 27—the day which marks the ratification of the World Peace Pact. No other day in history is pregnant with such good for all mankind.

Many of our holidays had their origin in conflicts which were born of misunderstanding, greed, hatred, and revenge. Many of our holidays are celebrated, in part, so as to perpetuate misunderstanding, greed, hatred, and revenge.

Let us make August 27 a holiday on which travelers the world over, under every flag, will get together to strengthen their unity of purpose and rejoice in common aspirations.

Last year more than 300,000 travelers from the United States went to Europe. More were there in August than in any other month. Think what it would mean for them to unite, once a year, with the citizens of all nations in celebration of the renunciation of war! It would be one more permanent force for world peace.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

MORE THINGS THAT ARE GONE

Yesterday, as part of America's look ahead into the next decade of her economic life, I listed three factors underlying the prosperity of the last decade, on which we probably cannot count as heavily in the next decade.

These three factors were: (1) The phenomenal automobile production which raced ahead while the American people were becoming automobile owners for the first time, a production that will, in the future tend to scale down to a meeting of the demand for replacement and the new demand that growth of population will create; (2) The suburban building boom created by the postponed building enforced by the war and an almost epidemic exodus of home owners from the cities to the suburbs, a development now facing the fact that delayed building is being caught up and the exodus to the suburbs is settling down to normal; (3) The radio industry which faces the same problem of settling down to replacement and satisfying the new demand created by growth of population that the automobile industry faces.

Today I list some added factors of the last decade that will have diminished force in the next decade. They are:

(4) Foreign trade. Our export trade was on the wane for several months before the market crash came. Europe found it impossible to export enough goods to the United States to make it economically sound practice for her t oimport American goods too heavily. Europe was getting on her to import American goods too of crops and commodities and did not need so many American goods and foodstuffs. And the roaring American market of early 1929 kept at home money that might otherwise have financed further European industrial development, to say nothing of the fact that the American market sucked money out of Europe. The outlook is that, in the absence of some drastic reversals of policy on our part or on Europe's part, our export trade for the next decade will be slowed down.

(5) The religion of style. During the last decade the religion of style—annual models and the like—was in the flush period of making converts; during the next decade it will be less a matter of making converts of the millions, and more a matter of keeping these converts as paying communicants. And there are some signs of revolt against kaleidoscopic changes of models and styles.

(6) Installment buying. Here again we are probably facing a problem of normal development following an abnormal period of pioneer promotion.

There are, of course, other factors that will operate with changed force in the next decade, but these will suffice to illustrate the kind of analysis that America must, it seems to me, make if she is to plan her future intelligently.

Tomorrow I shall speak of some things that remain.

OUR CHILDREN

THE SECRET SIGNAL

Peggy was a very little girl—just five. Her family was one of those rich in relatives and poor in children. So everybody took an interest in Peggy. Sometimes this interest was hard to bear and Peggy was known to break into tears. Sometimes they were tears of rage, and then she stamped her foot and screamed. Sometimes they were tears of fatigue and then she lay down on the floor and wept copiously, and with waiting variations.

Father was her great friend, next to mother. Mother tried to keep the visitors attention centered on other things but they always turned to Peggy. Then father had a bright idea. He and Peggy made up a secret. They would have some secret signs and talk to each other right when there were other folks in the room and they would never know.

If father coughed behind his hand and lifted his right eyebrow he meant, "How's tricks?" and if tricks were all right Peggy was to brush her hair back with her right hand and wink with the left eye.

If father should say suddenly, "Well, there's that dog," Peggy was to run right out of the room and take a drink of water or have a little leg stretching race about the yard. That was to happen if tricks were not so good and there was danger of tears.

You have no idea what joy that secret charm held for a bothered little girl. If she was too tired to sit still any longer and she either had to sit or get out of the place, she was to scratch the end of her nose with her right forefinger. Father was to rub his left ear when Peggy was to slip away.

You see it was the comfort of knowing that if things were too much there was a friend at hand and a way out. There was, too, the happy relationship between a child and her parents, a bond that was precious beyond words, one that would hold in times of stress. One that would hold in years to come.

Some grown people fear to have such understandings with a child, some old idea of the place of a child and the dignity of the elders. Well, truth is stronger than dignity every time.

When grandmother is having a tantrum, and there are those who do—when uncle is being crabby and auntie edgy, it is far better to rub the end of the nose thoughtfully, sneeze one into the handkerchief and look expressively at Peggy which signals "Isn't it awful?" than to pretend that things are all right—that whatever a grown-up does is right. Peggy will stand the row better and will have a truer understanding of life and of people, and the family tie will not be strained.

I think a code of secret signals are just the thing. Try a set of your own and see. They work in many a difficult situation.

HEGEL'S BIRTH

On August 27, 1770, Georg Hegel, one of the greatest German philosophers, was born at Stuttgart, Germany.

His association at the University of Tubingen with Schelling, the philosopher, had a great intellectual influence on him. When he finished college Helgel became a tutor in Switzerland and then an instructor of philosophy at the University of Jena.

In 1811, after he had published his Encyclopedia of Philosophical Sciences, he accepted the chair of philosophy at the University of Berlin where his lectures attracted hearers from all ranks and professions. Because he ardently defended existing political institutions, he rose to great political influence. The noted aphorism in which he summed up his teaching, "The rational is the actual, and the actual is the rational," was taken to imply that the Prussian organizatiin was the perfection of reason and freedom.

Helgel's system which is usually termed the "philosophy of the absolute," falls into three departments: logic, or the science of thought in its pure unity with itself; the philosophy of nature, in which the ideal principle is shown to underlie even the material world; and the philosophy of spirit.
